Mr. Rockefeller's Choice
Mr. Ford's 64 Years
Mr. Hoover's Bright Hopes
Mrs. Taylor's Song Fear

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR., told the No. 26 Broadway Club, all employes of Standard Oil, that the four important qualities are CHARACTER, INTEGRITY, CLEAN LIVING, SINGLENESS OF PURPOSE.

Mr. Rockefeller's father, who built one of the greatest fortunes and uses it fighting disease and ignorance, selected two things, important in material success, PATIENCE AND ECONOMY.

Which is most important—character, integrity, clean living or singleness of purpose? Singleness of purpose brings success. Character and clean living make it worth while. Integrity is the foundation of the other three.

Useful thought is promoted by defining and ranking, according to their importance, the qualities within us. Saint Paul, 13th Chapter, 1st Corinthians, selects "Faith, Hope, Charity, those three; but the greatest of these is Charity."

Bacon's three aids to mental efficiency, quoted from memory, are "Reading maketh a full man. Writing maketh an exact man. Speaking maketh a ready man."

Bacon's three should interest young salesmen.

At London's first exhibition of the Ford car the crowd was so great "it was difficult to elbow one's way into the room." The low prices amaze the British and disturb British manufacturers. Ford, with plants in Paris, England, Ireland, Peking and elsewhere, will operate inside the tariff walls.

In one particular respect the new Ford is better than the Lincoln. Its windshield is made of non-shattering glass, which does not fly about in case of collision.

On the first day London ordered 64,000 new Ford cars, and 450,000 new Fords have been ordered already in the United States.

The Canadian demand is proportionately as great. Stock in the Ford Company of Canada has gone up $400 a share.

"Singleness of purpose," which Mr. Rockefeller recommends, seems to have worked well in Henry Ford's case.

What interests men past middle age is the fact that Henry Ford, for thirty years, has worked under terrific pressure, day and night, eclipsing in achievement every industrialist, manufacturer and big business man that ever lived, is able at sixty-four years of age to throw aside and junk the greatest collections of tools and machinery in the world and start new. He has closed down a business that would have paid him millions of profit a year, had he been content to let it "gradually die out."

And at sixty-four, with the energy of twenty-five, he creates a new, gigantic business, doing that which his friends and competitors all would have thought impossible.

Calles Ordered U. S. Clergymen Paid $210,000

N. Y. MEXICAN AGENT WROTE PRESIDENT OF $5,000,000 OIL FUND

Copyright, 1927, by the Washington Herald.

Washington, D. C.—The Hearst papers today publish Mexican Presidential orders for propaganda payments to two American clergymen, a Protestant minister and a rabbi; also official correspondence showing an attempt to resurrect the old bugaboo of American oil interests plotting revolution in Mexico.

President Calles, the Mexican executive, issued two orders for the payment of money to the Protestant clergyman, one for $10,000 on May 15, 1926, and the other for $50,000, on February 15, 1927. The Hearst papers have the original orders, signed by Calles, with the name of the proposed recipient intact.

These orders, in English translations, follow:

To the citizen secretary of the treasury and public credit.

You will please order the treasurer general of the Nation to issue a pay-warrant in favor of ——— for the sum of $10,000, to be delivered by him to the Reverend ———, as payment for lectures in favor of Mexico.

You will order that a receipt be obtained from the interested person for this sum, making the corresponding notation and charging the item to secret expenditures of

FIND HAPGOOD GUILTY ON SPEAKIING CHARGE

After deliberating 24 hours and 15 minutes a Superior Court jury today found Powers Hapgood, Harvard graduate, guilty of making a public address without a permit at a Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting on the Common last August.

The jurors failed to agree on a verdict on a charge of rioting on which Hapgood was also tried.

In the case of Cosmo Carvotti, tried with Hapgood, they disagreed on both charges, rioting and attacking a policeman with intent to rescue a prisoner.

Hapgood won a not guilty verdict from another jury before which he was tried in quick time yesterday afternoon after his other trial ended. This verdict was returned sealed during the night and opened in court today. Hapgood was charged with loitering and sauntering in front of the State House in the Sacco-Vanzetti "death parade."

Five others tried with Hapgood on this charge were likewise acquitted. They are: George Kraska of Winthrop, George L. Peeple, New York civil engineer; John Dos Passos, Harvard graduate and author; Ellen Hayes, retired Wellesley professor, and Catherine Huntington of Beacon Hill.

Two more, "Mother" Ella Bloor of New York and John Howard Lawson, New York playwright, were tried before this jury on the charge of obstructing foot passage all were found not guilty.

HICCOUGHS KILLING HUB VET; WIFE IN LIFE PLEA

Death seems imminent for John McCarthy, war veteran and father of seven children, as a result of the ailment usually considered harmless, hiccoughs.

The man, now exhausted at his home, No. 75 Clapp street, Roxbury, has been hiccoughing steadily since Thanksgiving day, and no fewer than 15 physicians, called by his wife, have been unable to give him relief.

His wife, losing faith in the physicians, now asks that any who may know an old-fashioned remedy send it to her as she fears her husband will die of utter exhaustion.

There are five girls and two boys in the family, ranging in age from 3 years to 15.

SOVIET DEMAND VOTED DOWN AT ARMS PARLEY

Geneva, Dec. 3 (I.N.S.)—The League of Nations preparatory disarmament conference adjourned today until March 15 after the Russian Soviet delegate had made an unsuccessful effort to bring about an international parley early in January to discuss "actual disarmament" without reference to national security.

Maxim Litvinoff, head of the Soviet delegation, objected to the procedure and was supported by Count von Bernstorff, chief of the German delegation. The Rusian envoy gave assurance, however, that his country would be represented at the March session.

President J. J. Loudon assured the opposition group the program would not prevent a general disarmament conference being held later in 1928.

Following Litvinoff's request that

WOMEN, OVER AL SMITH PLEA, DEMAND DRY LAW

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 3 (I.N.S.)—Despite the declaration of Governor Alfred E. Smith that there was no need for a State prohibition enforcement law, the New York State League of Women Voters in session here today adopted a resolution urging enactment of a State dry law.

Adoption of the prohibition resolution came a few hours after Governor Smith went before the women and denounced prohibition.

In addition to the demand for a State dry law, they declared in favor of women serving on juries, in favor of Governor Smith's proposal for a four-year term for Governor, for extension of the occupational disease law and for State aid for the Federal Shepherd-Towner maternity law.

BEACH ADMITS WRITING JUST 'FRIENDLY' NOTES TO MRS. LILLIENDAHL

Mays Landing, N. J., Dec. 3.—A solemn denial that he had killed Dr. A. William Lilliendahl or knew who did, coupled with admissions of a "friendly correspondence" with the doctor's wife before the slaying, featured the testimony of Willis Beach in his own defense today.

Beach, a gray-haired little chicken farmer, is on trial with Mrs. Lilliendahl for the murder of the doctor.

In his testimony he accounted for every hour of September 15, the day of the slaying.

Beach spoke directly to the jury most of the time in direct and cross-examination, instead of to the attorneys questioning him.

Mrs. Lilliendahl leaned back in her chair, her arms folded, complacently listening to her co-defendant's story.

Beach flatly denied the testimony of a Vineland plowman that he had stumbled upon the defendants in an evening tryst in roadside woods, and insisted he and Mrs. Lilliendahl never had met in such a way as that suggested.

Admitting he had written the "Peggy Anderson" letters Beach said they were chiefly concerning Dr. Lilliendahl's health and that Mrs. Lilliendahl's replies were along the same line.

She had suggested the name "Peggy" as one she had been known by earlier in life, he said. This correspondence took place after he and Dr. Lilliendahl had quarreled.

He said all the letters exchanged had been destroyed and expressed regret over this because they would have shown there was nothing wrong in them, he declared.

A feature of Beach's story was that in which he told how he had lived in the loft of the barn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Parker, at Lynwood Heights, Penn., 100

ORDER 100 GANGSTERS ARRESTED IN REVERE

Ordering the police to round up and arrest at least 100 suspicious persons tonight, Dr. John E. Walsh, Mayor of Revere, today declared war on "gangsters, tire thieves, bums, thugs and dope-peddlers."

Innumerable cases of men and women being attacked on the streets at night, chiefly by two gangs, "the Beach street gang and the Revere street gang," led to this order, the Mayor said.

"I intend to ask Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson of the Boston police for the loan of two plain clothes men over the week-end to help in detecting the guilty parties," said Dr. Walsh.

"This is no reflection on our own special officers but ours are known and we want men unknown to the gangs.

"However, I will consider it a serious reflection on the local police department if they don't make the roundup ordered and I will make wholesale suspensions if action is not forthcoming.

"Four youths who happened to have politicians in their families are now being protected by some policemen, their names being withheld, and I also want those men arrested and intend to take drastic action if they are not. Revere is before

U. S. FLIERS AWAY ON TRIP TO NICARAGUA

Mills Field, San Francisco, Dec. 3 (A.P.)—The tri-motored monoplane Spirit of California, which started at 8:55 a. m. today on an endurance flight, returned here at 11:11½ a. m. because of a "tail flutter."

Miami, Fla., Dec. 3 (A.P.)—Major E. H. Brainerd, commander of the United States Marine Corps Aviation forces, Sergeant M. T. Shepard, pilot, and Corporal N. M. Winchester, mechanic, hopped off at 6:22 o'clock this morning on a non-stop "line of duty" flight to Managua, Nicaragua.

They planned to deliver their tri-motored Fokker monoplane to marine corps officers there for service with the American troops. Flying conditions were announced "perfect" for the flight.

Major Brainerd's preliminary figures had allowed ten hours for the jump to Managua, which was routed southward to Havana, west to the tip of Yucatan, down the Yucatan coast and across Honduras into Nicaragua.

DENIES HE KEPT ANY 'TRYSTS'

miles from Baltimore, and denial, corroborated by the Parkes, that he had been in Baltimor eduring that period, when it is alleged he was hiding from the police.

The first question asked of Beach was:

"Did you take any part whatsoever in the killing of J. D. Lilliendahl?"

Beach promptly replied:

"I did not!"

Q.—Did you ever see the gun loaned or given to your son Ray? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was it one of these? (Witness was shown two exhibits.) A.—Yes. That was the gun given my son Ray.

Q.—Where was that gun found? A.—One of these two guns was found in a closet downstairs: the other in Ray's room.

Q.—Besides these revolvers, did you at any time have any other revolvers in your house? A.—Never at any time.

Q.—Do you recall the first time you met Dr. Lilliendahl? A.—I do.

Q.—That was a year ago? A.—Just about a year ago.

Q.—Did you meet Mrs. Lilliendahl at that time? A.—Not at that time later.

Q.—Did a friendship result? A.—It did.

Q.—Did you take auto rides together? A.—We did.

Q.—Where did you sit? A.—On the front seat with Mrs. Lilliendahl. It was at the doctor's request. I sat turned to face him and he sat behind me.

Q.—Did Dr. Lilliendahl make objection to you coming to his house? A.—No.

He Called Him 'Doc'

Q.—Was there any conversation between you and Dr. Lilliendahl about chickens? A.—Yes, it was about the first week in May, 1927. The doctor and I had been very friendly. I sometimes called him 'Doc'; sometimes 'Lilly.' He called me Willis.

He told me he could cure chickens of chicken pox in three days. I said: 'Doc, you're full of mush." I asked him to repeat what he said and he did, and then I said: "Doc, you're a fool!" Then he said: "You're a bigger one."

We were talking pretty loud and Mrs. Lilliendahl came out and said to come in the house. I said: "I'm getting out of here," and I left.

Q.—Did you treat Dr. Lilliendahl in a friendly manner after that? A.—Yes, I always spoke when I met him. I raised my hand and waved when I passed him on the road.

Q.—Did you ever make any friendly overtures? A.—Yes, I was on a fishing trip at the lake here in Mays Landing and caught a mess of fish. I went by the Lilliendahl home on my way home and said: "Come on over, Billy boy." Dr. Lilliendahl came and I said: "Do you want some fish?" and I gave him some. Mrs. Lilliendahl brought a dishpan and I put the fish in it. Dr. Lilliendahl said: "There shouldn't be any hard feelings between us," and I said: "No, there shouldn't."

Q.—How long have you known the Parkers (with whom he stayed while a fugitive)? A.—Twenty years.

At Parker Home

Q.—Were you charged with murder at the time you spent with them? A.—No.

Q.—Were you ever in Baltimore? A.—No.

Q.—Were you ever in the woods with Mrs. Lilliendahl? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever write any letters to one "Peggy Anderson"? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who was "Peggy Anderson"? A.—Mrs. Lilliendahl.

Q.—What was the nature of those letters? A.—Well, they weren't really letters—just notes.

Q.—Did you ever receive any letters from Peggy Anderson? A.—Yes.

Q.—Can you produce any? A.—They were destroyed.

Q.—Now, Mr. Beach, how many letters did you receive from Mrs. Lilliendahl, two or three a day? A.—Oh, no, probably a dozen altogether. And I sent the same number.

Q.—Now, can you tell us what was in those notes? A.—To arrange meetings in town, and I usually inquired after the doctor's health. I heard he was sick.

Q.—Did you ever embrace Mrs. Lilliendahl? A.—No.

Coming down to the time of the immediate investigation of the crime, Beach was asked if Detective Frank Harrold ever cursed him.

Shakes Fist at Jury

Beach clenched his fist, shook it at the jury and answered: "He called me a liar."

Then, he testified, he had a heart attack brought on through questioning and left his South Vineland home on Sept. 27 to escape a repetition of it.

"Now, tell us, please, Mr Beach, your actions Sept. 15 from the time you arose until 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon," said Attorney Hedges.

"On the morning of the 15th I got up late," Beach answered. "I think it was 7:30. After breakfast I shaved and changed my clothing, went out to the garage, got my car and left for Vineland around 9:10.

"I stopped and had my shoes polished. I went down and bought a paper. I drove on the Atlantic avenue to the Mill road and turned west on Mill road to Chestnut avenue. I turned on to the boulevard and went along it to the lane through Mr. Thornborrow's farm.

"I arrived home approximately at 10:15. The pump on my car was leaking and I fixed that and went in the house just as the clock was striking 11. Not feeling well, I lay down a little while, then got up and read the paper.

"At 12 my son came in and said, 'Dad lunch is ready.' I ate, then went out in the yard and got in the car. Mr. Howard came out, but I didn't have time to talk to him.

"I drove down the main road to Lincoln, to Buena Vista and Buena Vista to Hammonton.

"I went to Wilson & Collins', the monument makers. I asked Collins to go to the cemetery with me. We got to the cemetery at quarter past 1. He told me I'd need three feet more in the lot to give the space for the markers I was getting.

"We came back to town the back way and to his office, where I remained for some time. I left there at 4:20. I looked at my watch at the time. It was 5 or 5:15 when I got home."

Q.—Mrs. Tamberlain testified you said something about burning letters, one about your wife, that she could get a divorce on. Did you ever say anything like that? A.—No, never.

Q.—Was there any talk of a divorce? A.—No, never.

Q.—Did you ever tell her you were considering leaving Vineland, that you were tired of things at home? A.—No.

Q.—The statement was made by Mrs. Tamberlain that you said about Dr. Lilliendahl, "If he don't stop hounding me, I'll get him." Did you ever say that? A.—No.

Cross-Examined

Prosecutor Hinkle took over the witness for cross-examination. He read the bond which the witness signed holding him as a material witness, particularly that part which stated Beach was not to leave the jurisdiction of the court without permission.

"I didn't know," said Beach, "that I wasn't free to go when and where I pleased."

Q.—Then, why did you hide? A.—I thought the police wanted me—to put me through the kind of grill which I had been submitted on a prior occasion.

Q.—How did you amuse yourself in that loft? A.—Reading.

Q.—What did you read? A.—Magazines and newspapers.

Q.—What newspapers? A.—All I could get hold of.

Q.—What did you read in the papers? A.—I wanted to see what kind of police you had—and whether they could catch me.

Q.—You were afraid of leaving the loft for even the barest necessities of life? A.—I wasn't afraid of anything; I didn't want to be picked up by the police and taken to your barracks—and go through the same treatment I had gone through before.

Witness told of leaving the Parker home in the dead of night and proceeded to May's Landing by automobile. He said he had arranged to meet his brother Roy. This was early October 6, the day the grand jury met.

He said he met his counsel, Mr. Hedges, on the road, and that Hedges was present at the time he (Beach) surrendered to the authorities.

Q.—Now after you had outwitted the police for 11 days, you wanted them to have a "break" so you surrendered? A.—They needed a break. Don't you think they needed it? (laughter).

Q.—When you went to the post-office, Mr. Beach, to mail the (Peggy Anderson) letters, didn't you pass the Lilliendahl home? A.—Yes.

Letters Cease

Q.—Why didn't you stop in—instead of writing to her? A.—I had quarrelled with the doctor.

Q.—Why didn't you make up? A.—I suppose I was proud.

Q.—A little stubborn, eh? A.—Perhaps.

Q.—Why did you write Mrs. Lilliendahl under the name of Peggy Anderson? A.—Because she was nicknamed Peggy in her younger days and she said to put the Anderson on it. She said it would all be over soon, the quarrel.

Q.—And this arrangement went on for months, this correspondence, and she said "It will all be over soon." A.—What do you call months?

Q.—When did it cease? A.—In August.

Q.—What did you do with the letters you received? A.—I destroyed them as soon as I read them.

Q.—Why? A.—Well, they weren't any use to anyone. They just told me how the doctor was, and asked simple questions about what I'd done. There was nothing in them.

Q.—In writing these letters to Peggy Anderson, who suggested the name Peggy Anderson? A.—I don't just recall. She suggested the Peggy part of it. I don't recall who suggested the other part of it.

Q.—Why didn't you write her as Mrs. Lilliendahl? A.—She suggested that I use another name and I did so. Not only that, but the doctor knew I was writing to her as Peggy Anderson.

Doctor Aware of Notes

Q.—How did you know that? A.—Mrs. Lilliendahl said the Doctor read all the letters. There was no secret about the correspondence.

Q.—And the Doctor knew about this correspondence under an assumed name, at a post office box? A.—That's the way I understood it. If you had one of the letters to read, there wouldn't be this misunderstanding. It's very unfortunate for me and Mrs. Lilliendahl that there aren't any of these letters.

Q.—Now, you said you did not kill Dr. Lilliendahl? A.—Yes. I did not kill Dr. Lilliendahl.

Q.—Do you know who killed him? A.—I do not.

Q.—If you knew would you say so? (Objection by Mr. MacCarter sustained.)

Q.—When did you first see Mrs. Lilliendahl on September 15? A.—I told you I didn't see her at all that day.

Just before the defendants were taken back to prison for the noon meal a group of friends, socially prominent in the exclusive Mountain Lakes district, Mrs. Lilliedahl's former home, grouped about her and offered their felicitations.

She greeted each one with a warm smile and embrace, kissing several of the fashionably dressed women.

Loses Composure

Beach's self-reliance and composure began to desert him in the afternoon session, as Prosecutor Hinkle questioned him concerning a statement the witness made soon after the murder. He frequently answered questions by saying "I don't remember" or "I don't recall," and seemed slightly frustrated.

He didn't remember whether he had denied writing letters to Mrs. Lilliendahl. "I might have," he said. "They were of no importance, just little notes of no importance."

Q.—Did you ever have any jewelry belonging to Mrs. Lilliendahl? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you pawn a ring belonging to Mrs. Lilliendahl September 9, 1926? A.—Not Mrs. Lilliendahl's ring. It was my ring.

Q.—I'll show you another ring. Whose is it? A.—Mine.

Q.—Mrs. Lilliendahl ever have that ring? A.—No sir.

Q.—How did that ring get out of your possession? A.—I pawned it, almost eight months ago.

It was a sizable diamond ring.

Q.—Did you authorize anyone to redeem that ring? A.—No sir.

Q.—Did you purchase a lady's white gold diamond for $150? A.—I did.

Q.—You left this jurisdiction after the killing because you were afraid? A.—No, I wasn't afraid. My doctor had tol me to avoid excitement. I was very nervous from the grilling I had already had. The detectives had told me that the next day they were going to give me an examination that would make me see blood. So I decided to drop out of sight until the court wanted me. When it did I came back.

Q.—Who told you you'd see bloodblood? A.—Some of your men, I suppose. I don't know who it is. There were 50 people in my yard all the time, day and night, police, detectives, reporters. It was a regular circus. They peeked in my windows all night and blew off their flash lights so I couldn't breath."

Revere Mayor Catches City Employe Off Job, "Sheiking" in Hub

Mayor Walsh of Revere has no regard for "sheiks," least of all when they consume city time in cafes of the Boston theatrical district, according to an order sent today to Michael J. O'Donnell, Revere commissioner of public works.

His Honor came across an employe of O'Donnell's department last week when he stepped into a Tremont street cafe for lunch after a conference at Boston police headquarters. The Mayor says the man was not off duty though he was dressed up in his Sunday best and sported a pink on his coat lapel.

Charges will be preferred, while O'Donnell is instructed to warn other members of the department.

COUSINS ELOPE AFTER DANCE WITH HUB BOYS

What started out to be a dancing party at a Fall River roadhouse turned out to be a double elopement for two Attleboro High School girls, cousins, one of them said today, at her new Boston home in Beacon street.

Vivian Duchette, 17, was wedded to Elliott G. Crawford and her cousin, Marie Cummings, to Malcolm Armstrong, after an all-night journey to Athens, N. Y., where a five-day waiver doesn't mean a thing, and a wedding ceremony for out-of-towners is a municipal event. The two couples were married the day after Thanksgiving.

The usual parental censures followed, only to be pleasantly effaced by blessings and all that sort of thing.

Crawford is a recent graduate of Alfred University, Alfred, N. Y., but is now in business in the Hub. The other couple are honeymooning in New York.

THREE-SECOND QUAKE FELT IN GUATEMALA

(By Associated Press)

The Tropical Radio Telegraph Company received a radio message today from its station at Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, reporting a "very pronounced earth tremor at 2:12 this morning, lasting three seconds."

The Harvard seismograph, out of adjustment for long-distance recording for the past few days, did not pick up the earth tremor reported in Guatemala early this morning, it was stated. The machines were being used for experimental work and would not ordinarily pick up the three-second tremor unless finely adjusted.

COMMITS "SOCIAL ERROR" IN ASKING PAY RAISE

Declaring that Revere firemen committed "a social error" in submitting a request for pay raise when new apparatus and six additional men are about to be put on, Mayor Walsh today denied a raise of $200 per year, requested by a committee headed by Harold S. Jackson, aide to Chief McCarrick.

"A new ladder truck for the Walden street house and hire of six men at $11,000 per year makes the time inopportune for the increase," he said.

"Such an attitude on the part of the Soviets is obviously one of obstruction," said the French official. "We cannot ask small nations to disarm unless their national security is guaranteed. If the Soviets intend to invoke a conference which places security aside France will not be represented in that conference."

Litvinoff's action was in line with the Soviets' original plan as announced on the opening day, the most drastic proposed in any peace parley, calling for complete abandonment of all armies, navies and air forces and destruction of all forts and munitions factories.

J. Willard Baker of Pawtucket, a trustee of the school, and Rev. William Reid of Providence headed the delegation, which included ministers and churchmen from every city in the State.

HOLIDAY BOOZE WORTH $500,000 AND SHIP SEIZED

Girl Needs $1,800 a Year If She Has Chiffon Hose

Chicago, Dec. 3 (A.P.).—It has been determined scientifically at the University of Chicago that a young woman ought to earn $1,800 or more if she wants to wear chiffon hose and go to the theatre.

A budget, prepared and illustrated from advertising columns of daily newspapers by Miss Katherine Blunt of the home economics department, shows exactly what could be done on $1,800 annually.

It assumes that such a girl could find a girl to share a $75 apartment without kitchenette, making her share of the rent $37.50.

The budget then allows $3 a week for board; 35 cents a day for lunch; $14 a month for carfare; $1.80 for telephone; $50 a year for doctor, a dentist; $583 a year for clothing; $21.19 for cosmetics; $8.95 for jewelry; $30 for vacation; $250 for savings, and $1.75 a week for recreation.

The clothing budget allows for 10 dresses, the most expensive costing $20, and three coats, including a slicker, totalling $162.

MEDFORD CITY OFFICIAL HURT IN CRASH

Edward Frazier, agent of the Medford Board of Health and city plumbing inspector, was seriously injured in a crash that wrecked one automobile and half submerged another in the Mystic River flats today.

The accident occurred in Mystic avenue near Combination Park while, police say, Frazier was turning his car around and it collided with another machine driven by Anthony DeLucca, of Hinsdale street. Frazier's car was overturned and wrecked and he was thrown out on his head. He was taken to Lawrence Memorial Hospital, where his condition is serious.

DeLucca's car left the road and came to a stop half sumberged in mud and water. He escaped with a wetting.

Mayor Walsh explained that one of the gangs makes a practice of idling in doorways until a man comes along, perhaps escorting a girl, "and if the man happens to have a good-looking hat on, they take the hat, beat him up and don't always spare the girl."

Two Malden youths, leaving a garage in North Shore road where they had stopped for car repairs on their way home, were beset by 15 thugs early this morning and only saved by the timely arrival of Patrolman Daniel Sullivan, sent for by the garage night man. The youths were Daniel Reardon of Preston street and Edward Hartig of Wentworth street, Malden.

TINKHAM HOME AFTER 43,300 MI. GLOBE TROT

Congressman George Holden Tinkham, globe trotter extraordinary, is back in Washington, according to a dispatch received in Boston today, after traveling continuously 224 days, or 7½ months, by boat, rail, motor and airplane a distance of 43,300 miles.

In the longest journey he ever essayed, Congressman Tinkham visited Tahiti and Rarotonga in the South Sea Islands, New Zealand Australia and Tasmania, Ceylon, Sumatra, Straits Settlements, Java, the Island of Bali in the Malay Archipelago, Siam, French Indo-China, Burma, India, Arabia at Aden Egypt at Cairo, and France.

"That should constitute some sort of a record," said the genial Congressman, who for fourteen years has represented the Eleventh Massachusetts District.

The trip was unsuccessful in one sense, in that he failed to shoot a tiger, due to the fact that it was the rainy season when he spent ten days stalking in Chota, Nagpur, India.

Virtually everywhere he went he found friends he had made in previous globe-trotting trips, including the Resident Commissioner of Rarotonga, the premier of New Zealand, the Governor-General of Australia, the Governor of New South Wales, the premier of Victoria, the premier and Attorney General of South Australia, the Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies, the Raja of Karangasem of the Island of Bali, the resident commissioner of Battamxang in Cambodia, and the resident commissioner of Angkor, the Governor of Bengal and the viceroy of India in Delhi.

From Bangkok, Siam, he flew in a Siamese army plane to French Indo-China and visited the famous ruins at Angkor.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN
A HOME PAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK
BOSTON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1927

What Would You Give Coolidge for Xmas?

If YOU were going to spend $50 for a Christmas gift for the President of the United States, what would you buy?

The Boston Evening American is going to send President Calvin Coolidge some little remembrance of the season and YOU are going to choose it.

This is not a contest. This paper is merely inviting its readers to co-operate in the choice of a gift to the nation's chief executive. There are no strings attached and the only qualifications are these: It shall cost $50 and it must be made in New England.

The price limit is given in order to narrow the range of your suggestion. And the gift must be of New England origin because the man who will receive it is of New England and does to a large extent exemplify New England tradition and ideals.

Inasmuch as New England manufactures almost every worth-while product, the second qualification should not hamper one in making a choice.

The Boston Evening American must do its Christmas shopping early, along with the rest of considerate New England. Send us your suggestions, as many as you like, but get them in to us by December 15.

Address "President's Gift Editor, Boston Evening American, No. 5 Winthrop square, Boston, Mass."

DOZEN GIRLS, 3 MEN OFFER TO SELL EARS

Chicago, Dec. 3 (A.P.).—The market for left ears was bullish today as a dozen young women and three men offered their portside aural appendages to the unnamed New York and Chicago society woman who advertised for one.

Jay J. McCarthy, the attorney whose client has sought through the want ad columns to get an ear to replace one she lost in a motor accident abroad, said the offer of $2,500 would be doubled provided the transfer of the ear from the seller to buyer proved successful.

One offer came from a young mother who wanted $4,000 instead of $2,500. Pressing bills, she explained, made her willing to make the sacrifice.

Another offer came from Miss Doris Clarke, young pretty and she explained broke. She wanted a fur coat and proposed to market a left ear if it met requirements.

One offer by men came from a war veteran who explained that "nobody cares how I look, anyway."

'ABIE' MOANS OVER SUICIDE TRY OF 'ROSE'

"I thought a lot of Mary and wouldn't have this happen for anything in the world. But what could a fellow do in the face of strict objections of her parents," said Robert Silberstein, Harvard law student, today as he bemoaned the suicide attempt of Mary Daly, 18, pretty cashier in a Cambridge movie house.

The girl was rushed to the Cambridge Relief Hospital after swallowing poison in a taxi enroute from the theatre. The girl pointed to a bag containing a letter from Silberstein, calling off their friendship, when the driver discovered her writhing on the cab floor.

"The story of the altercation at the door of my apartment is all wrong," the student hastily added. "Mary never told me of her parental objections, neither did her mother or police officer tell me to cease acquaintance.

"I learned from sources that I don't care to mention that my company was causing Mary untold unpleasantries at home and decided it was best to quit for her sake."

Silberstein said he knew Mary six months, liked her very much and still likes her. He inquired for news of her condition.

Meanwhile the pretty cashier, love dreams blasted, lies on a cot in the hospital with horrible burns from iodine. She is forbidden to talk of the shattered dreams.

At the Daly home, Cabot street, Everett, Mrs. A. M. Daly, the girl's mother, talked freely—between taps of the foot—of the many parental warnings to "keep way from that fellow."

"She'll get over this passing fancy and forget all about him," she coolly said.

"I didn't approve of the friendship and naturally told my daughter so."

Army and Navy Ball in Hotel Statler Proves to Be Great Success

THE ARMY AND NAVY BALL LAST EVENING AT THE Hotel Statler was enormously successful. It had all the necessary ingredients to make it so It had a throng of dancers that more than completely filled the immense ballroom. It had brilliant color. It had an orchestra whose lilting strains brought even the dowagers to the polished floor. And since it was an Army and Navy function, every branch of Uncle Sam's service donned its spick uniforms and its honorable decorations and hied itself to the Statler. Those men and matrons who staged the ball, to benefit the Soldiers and Sailors Club in Fayette street, are due for countless congratulations.

FLAGS FLUTTERED AND GENERALS AND ADMIRALS looked on benignly at the glowing scene. Ladies of high degree lent their presence. Everyone of the cordon of boxes about the ballroom had its smart quota. Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman, chairman in directing this huge affair to its successful end, was a brilliant figure in the ballroom maze, wearing a tulle and chiffon gown in holly red The Governor's Lady arrived, escorted by Colonel Harold Winslow, and, as usual, she was beautifully costumed. For the service ball she wore a chiffon of soft green, glinting with a rich pattern of dull gold. Mrs. Walter Merriam Pratt entertained a group. Her gown was gold, and she carried a fan of ostrich strikingly tinted.

MRS. JUDD DEWEY'S GOWN WAS OF DULL BLACK CHIFFON patterned in a sunburst effect in brilliants. Mrs. George W. Knowlton, Jr., just recently back from France, wore a Parisian confection of black with cut crystals. Mrs. Boylston Adams Beal and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Beal, were of a box party. Just across the ballroom Mr and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr and Mr. and Mrs. Horace Binney entertained. Their box held a pretty bride just back from her honeymoon, Mrs. Charles B. Delafield, in a gleaming satin frock of green. Mrs. Harry Hill Thorndike, mother of the bride (she was Miss Helen Quincy Thorndike) was in cerise satin and chiffon, and her sister, Miss Isabel Thorndike, in jade.

THE YOUNGER SET'S REPRESENTATION AT THE BALL was beautifully dressed. Mrs. Henry Bohlen, in bright green velvet; Mrs. Malcolm W. Greenough, in black velvet; Miss Agnes Boardman, in silver cloth; Miss Margaret Wentworth, in rose; Miss Elizabeth Lyman, in tulle and silver cloth; Miss Olga Frothingham, in maize; Miss Mary Louise Almy, in black chiffon; Miss Alice Weatherbee, in black velvet; Mrs. Chilton Richardson Cabot, in willow green; Mrs. Norman Cabot, in ecru lace and chiffon; Mrs. Channing Wells, in the Pratt box, wore a white metal cloth costume that was very handsome, and Mrs. Oscar Holsey was radiant in cerise.

MRS. JOHN CHIPMAN GRAY CAME WITH HER DAUGHTER, Mrs. Henry Tudor. Mrs. Gray is never absent from an important function, be it opera or ball, musicale or lecture. Mrs. George Selfridge, who is hostess to Lady Mercer, entertained a box party. Mrs. Selfridge was in black with a lace mantilla, making a graceful scarf as well as a dash of contrast to her costume. Mrs. Harold J Coolidge wore a sequined velvet. Mrs. Henry Parkman, Jr., and Mr. Parkman presided over one box group, Mrs. Parkman in a handsome costume of jetted and sequined velvet.

TO THE THRILL OF A BOSTON DEBUT FOR MISS ELIZABETH SHERBURNE is added that super thrill of a debut in Baltimore, at the famously ultra exclusive Bachelors' Cotillion. This affair of making one's bow at the Lyric is an inheritance, no less, and comes to the charming Miss Sherburne through the distaff line. She merely follows in the footsteps of her mother, Mrs John Henry Sherburne, who was a Miss Harris in the Southern social stronghold, and of Miss Alice Sherburne, who did this same brilliant social progression two or three years ago.

MRS. SHERBURNE AND HER DAUGHTER ARE NOW IN Baltimore, where relatives high in the social scheme of the Southern city are adding all sorts of gay and frilly accompaniments to the debutante's entertaining. This and that affair, all for the Boston miss, shine lustrously in the fashionable calendar. Yesterday there was a luncheon at "Airslie" with Mrs. Randolph Barton, Jr., and Miss Eleanor Addison Barton the hostesses, and a tea given by Mr. and Mrs. J. Morrison Harris. Tomorrow, at luncheon at "Ivy Hill" in Stevenson, the Francis W. Ingleharts entertain for Miss Sherburne. And on Monday comes the cotillion, with a dinner by the doting grandparents.

MR. AND MRS. W. HALL HARRIS ARE GIVING THE DINNER immediately before the cotillon, at the Baltimore residence of the Hall Harrises, Jr. It doesn't fall to the lot of every debutante to thus have two debuts—but what bud exacting the great thrills from a first Winter could ask more? Miss Sherburne and Miss Betty Heath had a gay coming out dance here, at the Country Club, just a week or so ago, and everyone agreed it was a merry occasion—at any rate the Young Set danced until almost sun-up.

A DEBUTANTE MOST EXTRAORDINARILY FORTUNATE is Miss Miriam Winslow, daughter of the Sidney M. Winslows of "Fernwood" in Brookline. Miss Winslow has in "Fernwood," with its architectural picturesqueness and chateau-like spaces, a setting perfectly ideal for her presentation tea, on January 6, and for the dance that follows later, on January 9. These two functions have but recently been added to the debutante calendar, in reality, just definitely decided upon, as Mr. and Mrs. Winslow returned from a short European trip.

MISS WINSLOW IS A TALENTED GIRL. SHE DANCES WITH grace and verve and a technique quite faultlessly professional. And she rides superbly. Her string of mounts she shows to equal advantage in the ring or on the bridle paths, and many are the ribbons and cups (thanks to her expertness with the reins), that adorn the trophy room at "Fernwood." As a pleasant preliminary to the dance set for January 9, Miss Winslow's aunt, Mrs. Lawrence Ewing of Greenfield, is giving an ushers dinner at the Algonquin Club, and, of course, there will be a houseful of guests staying with Miss Winslow in Brookline.

AN ENTERTAINMENT PUT ON WITHIN THE SACRED PRECINCTS of the Chilton Club is bound to interest the town's most exclusive femininity. And since Mrs. John E. Thayer, Jr., is doing one of her masculine impersonations—a thing she does with great perfection—the show on Tuesday next is sure to be more than ordinarily interesting. Vincent Club performances of two or three years ago had invariably in the casts a smartly turned out "man" done by Mrs. Thayer. The skit she does with Mrs. Bolt, on Tuesday, is a clever turn, with a bit of dancing and a bit of dialogue, and is pre-destined to make a hit.

Marines to Keep Cup

The cup which for the past several years has been competed for annually in drills at the Army and Navy Ball is now the permanent possession of the Marines, the ''Devil Dogs'' winning the coveted trophy for the third successive time.

The Navy was second; the First Corps of Cadets, third, and the Army fourth. Major General Preston Brown, commander of the First Corps Area, presented the cup to the victorious detachment.

SOME VERY IMPORTANT FISH ARE BEING BROUGHT IN by the lecture net. And quite the star of them all is Lowell Thomas, who comes to town to talk on General Lawrence and General Allenby, those two romantic figures emerging from the war as it was waged in the Holy Land and in Arabia. It is the Junior Division of the S. P. C. C. which corrals this star, and has him appear in Symphony Hall on the evening of January 5. Patronage that evening will be of the smartest, since the Junior Division is a pet philanthropy of the ultra set.

MRS. JOSEPH SEABURY, OF THE JUNIOR DIVISION, HAS a hardworking staff at her disposal. It includes Mrs. George Saltonstall West, Mrs. John Hallowell, Miss Jane Shelley Megrew, Miss Elizabeth Beal and Miss Dorothy Winthrop. And headquarters at No. 43 Mount Vernon street is a hive of industry these days. The Division intends to put its benefit over with a bang. And having such a trump card as Mr. Thomas, their highest hopes will probably be realized.

OFFICIALDOM AND FASHIONDOM ARE AWAITING WITH open arms the advent of His Excellency, the French Ambassador, M. Paul Claudel, and His Excellency's daughter, Mademoiselle Claudel. The Alliance Francais and the Salon Francais has M. Claudel for its star speaker. And Society will have the parent and daughter for the stars of many hospitalities. The Russell Sturgis Codmans give a dinner, and the Frederick S. Whitwells a luncheon. Miss Pendleton, at Wellesley College, gives a luncheon for the distinguished foreigners, and while the French Consul entertains officially for the Ambassador, a young peoples' dinner goes on for his daughter.

TODAY MR. AND MRS. ALBERT FELIX SCHMITT, OF BRATTLE street, Cambridge, are sailing out of New York on the steamship "Antonia" on the first leg of a voyage that eventually ends at that smartest of smart resorts, Pau, in France. For some time their handsome Cambridge home will know them not, since Mr. Schmitt intends to settle down with his brush and palette for an indefinite stay abroad, and sometime in the Spring put on an exhibition and one-man show in Paris, mecca of the painting fraternity. The Schmitts will be at the Hotel Meurice in Paris before going to the south of France for the Winter.

SMART SET MEMBERS WHO TOOK PROMINENT PARTS IN THE HOTEL STATLER BALL

G. O. P. OFFICE BUYING KEPT UNDER COVER

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.
Editor of Universal Service.

Washington, Dec. 3.—Unless some troublemaker throws a monkey wrench into the machinery during the three-day meeting of the Republican National Committee here next week there will be no dragging out from the closet of "the skeleton of the G. O. P." This is the buying and selling of Federal offices in three Southern States without Republican representation in either of Congress.

Any aspirant for the Republican nomination for President whose supporter on the committee dared to denounce "the referee system" would be sure to lose support of all delegations from the Southern States it is declared.

Under this system the President turns over all Federal patronage to members of the national committee from those States without Republican representation in either house. Endorsement by the committeeman takes precedence over qualifications of his candidate.

Clothed with this power, those committeemen who distribute Federal patronage can, and many of them do, limit their "plums" to those who pay so much a head for upkeep of the referee system. The whole system of fees and collections is camouflaged as "party financing." These office-holders who fail to "come across" generally lose their jobs.

Several attempts have been made under this administration to get authority for the Senate committee on judiciary to probe the whole scandal. Members of the National Committee have always been able to have the resolution pigeon-holed.

Among 100 members of the committee only ten or twelve are classified potential troublemakers. If, however, Coolidge out of the race for renomination, should demand the National Committee clean house before the campaign, and follow this ultimatum, it was agreed today be would start something the potential troublemakers might be able to finish—a Republican house cleaning in the South.

$100,000,000 Gold For Christmas Stockings

New York, Dec. 3 (A.P.)—Santa Claus will drop some $100,000,000 in gold coins into expectant Christmas stockings in the United States this year, Federal Reserve Bank officials estimate.

The custom of giving gold coins as Christmas presents places a heavy strain on the Federal Reserve machinery, and on the banks that supply their clients with the coins.

The approach of Christmas also means the appearance of $1,000,000 worth of $2.50 gold pieces. This coin is not minted except on special occasions, but because of the demand 400,000 of them have been ordered struck off for the Christmas rush.

OIL FUND CHARGED

Fr. M. L. Montes De Oca.

American oil interests underwriting a five million dollar revolutionary fund for the overthrow of the Mexican government, was the alarming picture drawn for President Calles in a letter written by Arturo M. Elias, Mexican financial agent in New York, at the beginning of the present conflict between Church and State in Mexico.

This letter, dated June 23, 1926, conveyed to the Mexican executive certain "information" gathered for Elias by secret agents, whose principal business was that of watching the offices of oil companies. A copy of the communication is in the possession of the Hearst papers.

The practice of the Mexican government during recent years has been, every time it gets into trouble with discontented elements in its own country or faces a controversy with the United States, to accuse American oil interests of being at the bottom of the trouble. Without going into the numberless accusations made against various American oil companies, the Hearst papers state that they have no evidence, written or otherwise that any revolutionary fund was raised or even discussed by officials of the companies named in the Elias letter.

ENVOY IN CITY

The Elias letter follows, textually:

New York, N. Y.,
June 23, 1926.

Senor Plutarco Elias Calles,
President of the Mexican Republic,
Mexico, D F.

My Dear Brother: This is to salute you very affectionately and inform you of the activities of our enemies with respect to your government.

I have been informed, from a source which merits all credit, that Mr. Guy Stevens, president of the Association of Petroleum Producers in Mexico, a few days ago convoked a gathering in the offices of the association, of the chiefs of the Standard Oil Company, Sinclair Oil Company, International Oil Company and Huasteca Petroleum Company, to ask them to raise the sum of "5,000,000 (five millions of dollars), to aid in fomenting a new revolution to break out in Mexico in the beginning of next August, because of the enforcement of the religious laws and the consequent closing of the Catholic churches at the end of July.

Through the same source I learned that Stevens informed those present at the meeting that the revolutionary envoy was present in this city, awaiting the results of the conference, having come recommended to the president of the association by a high Catholic personage of Washington. According to my informant, the representative of the International and Sinclair Companies flatly refused the proposition; only the Standard Oil, Huasteca and Transcontinental accepting, saying that the said capital would be subscribed by the three companies which they represented, with the understanding that the revolution should count with a leader of recognized prestige, capable of facing the present Mexican government. A definite decision was deferred pending another meeting.

I believe, with all frankness, that these revolutionary plans are emanations from the priests and reactionaries of Mexico City, who, recognizing in Stevens a natural enemy of your government, are trying to ally the church interests with petroleum interests, which, in my opinion, would mean its failure. But this serves to manifest to you that the priests of Mexico City are conspiring against your government, and I believe the archbishopric of that city, in announcing the closure of the Catholic churches at the end of July has for its object the agitation of the fanatic masses of the country in order to lead them later into open revolt against your government. At the same time they will take advantage of the opportunity of agitating American public opinion in this country against your administration, thus prejudicing diplomatic relations between this country and ours, if the necessary measures are not taken in time to avoid it.

WATCHES OFFICES

I have placed a person of my absolute confidence to watch the offices of Mr. Stevens in order to ascertain who is the envoy of the Catholics who comes from Mexico to solicit financial aid from our enemies. I hope to be able to discover his identity very quickly and advise you of it, so that if he should return to the country you may detain him on the frontier and obtain from him information as to the persons he represents and their plans against your government.

I must say to you that although I believe these priests' plots are ridiculous, compared to the force and power of your government, nevertheless there exists one point of importance which we should not disregard. That is, that the alliance which the Catholics are seeking with petroleum interests inimical to your government, seeking in this form to place additional obstacles to the enforcement of the new laws, will aggravate the international problem which already exists because of the controversy over the relocativity of those laws.

May heaven grant that when the day arrives for the closing of the Catholic churches this may be effected peacefully, without resorting to violence and avoiding the flow of blood, for if this latter thing should happen we should immediately have the American administration against us, and this would give the enemies of your government the opportunity they desire of attacking us and provoking a reaction against us in the public opinion of this country.

I am leaving for Washington soon to confer with Tellez (Manuel C. Tellez, Mexican Ambassador to the United States), and will telegraph you the result of the conference from there. Haberman is leaving for Mexico City next week accompanied by Mr. C— with all their expenses paid until they return. I expect to send with him (Haberman), a report on the final result of the interview with Tellez. I hope you will send me by a safe channel copies of all the documents exchanged between the Government and Archbishopric of Mexico. It is very important to have them at hand here in order to use them in press propaganda if it should be necessary.

I hope you will give this information the importance it merits, taking the necessary measures to avoid that enemies of the Government in Mexico City take advantage of the situation and agitate the Federal troops with the religious question. I have confidence that your tact and good sense, which ever has characterized you, will secure to you the triumph you merit.

As ever, your brother who loves you.

President Calles replied in code on June 29 to his half-brother's long letter. This code message is now in the hands of the Hearst papers.

Deciphered, this message follows:

Your letter dated 23. Religious question is no, perilous. Mexican people now of sound mind and not as in 1857. I am confident controlling situation whatever form it may come. I await report that you are sending with envoy. Affectionate salutations.

P. ELIAS CALLES.

2 DOCTORS SEEK HEARING UPON VET CHARGE

Dr. Henry Ladd Stickney is inefficient in the performance of his duties at the Veterans' Tuberculosis Hospital at Rutland, according to Major Percy J. Cantwell, secretary of the New England Rehabilitation Committee of the American Legion, which demanded removal or transfer of Dr. Stckney and Dr. Bertell Talbot, executive officer, on the ground they are "temperamentally unfit" to remain at the institution.

"The whole matter is up to General Frank P. Hines, director of the United States Veterans' Bureau at Washington," said Major Cantwell today. "This thing was not done on snap judgment but after a long investigation which was begun before the Legion convention in Paris."

Dr. Stickney, who with Dr. Talbot, remains at his post at Rutland said today that he would seek justice.

"I don't say we are going to fight the case, for as far as we know there is nothing to fight, but we will demand justice and vindication," he said. "The Legion committee must bring specific charges and allow us to face witnesses supporting such charges.

"When they do that then will be the time for us to fight. We both ask that the general public suspend judgment until the matter is threshed out."

Major Cantwell said the charges were not brought by a few malcontents, but by the majority of veterans in the tuberculosis hospital.

SAYS WIFE DREW GUN ON REMUS

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 3 (I.N.S.)—Mrs. Imogene Remus drew a revolver from her handbag and threatened to "settle things right now" in a dispute with her husband, testified George Conners, former partner of George Remus, today at the trial of Remus for murder.

Conners said this happened in the Remus' "dream mansion" on Price Hill, late in the Spring of 1926. Remus and his wife were at odds over their pending divorce and property settlement.

"Remus was ill at the time," Conners said. "She came in and declared, 'what are you doing here—this is my home.' Remus said he had a perfect right in his own home.

"She half drew a pearl-handled pistol from her handbag. I grabbed her and took it away."

Conners related in detail numerous incidents that he told to Remus concerning his wife's alleged misconduct. These stories drove Remus into violent rages, the witness declared.

SCHOOL HEALTH TESTS ATTACKED BY VINCENT

School health tests were attacked in a talk given today before the New England Associations of Colleges and Secondary Schools at the Statler Hotel by President George E. Vincent of the Rockefeller foundation.

Citing statistics which showed that physical examinations in the schools are frequently of not more than 2½ minutes' duration, President Vincent declared the system is fraught with danger, giving to parents a false sense of security when otherwise they might take steps to prevent maladies.

FIND HAMLET'S CLOTHES; DRAG HARBOR NEAR DOCKS

A bundle of clothing found today on the Mystic docks, Charlestown, and ostensibly belonging to Harry Hamlet, 21, of Mayo street, is believed by the police to solve the mystery of that youth's disappearance Thursday. Police were despatched to drag the harbor near the docks in the expectation that Hamlet's body would be found. A card from an employment bureau and bearing the name of Hamlet with addresses on Mayo street and Talbot avenue was found with the clothing.

VERMONT BLANKETED BY 10 INCHES OF SNOW

Northwestern Vermont was today under a ten-inch blanket of snow which started falling yesterday.

The snow has improved a number of the country roads which have been practically impassable owing to heavy rains. Sleighs are in evidence.

Snow is from eight to twelve inches deep in the Adirondacks. Drifting partially blocked many mountain highways, but plows were rapidly clearing them. Thermometers registered 18 above.

Goodfellows! Time to Aid Needy Family

The Goodfellow Editor is greatly encouraged today.

Delightful letters are coming in to this paper, with offers of assistance for needy families. Of course, the calls for help are greatly in excess of the offers of assistance, but the number of Goodfellows is mounting daily.

Some readers have inferred, because certain letters have been printed in these columns, that it is possible for the Goodfellow Editor to carry on correspondence through the news columns, and the Goodfellow Editor wishes at the outset to correct this notion.

For example, a young woman writer to inquire concerning a case that attracted her attention and aroused her sympathies. She wishes to know whether someone from the Boston Evening American will undertake to care for a certain little girl if she sends some money to the Goodfellow Editor.

There is no signature to the letter, and no address, so that it is impossible to answer her through the mails. The Goodfellow Editor cannot undertake to answer anonymous letters through the paper, but will be more than pleased to answer letters personally through the mails when there is some special information desired.

WILL ACT AS AGENTS

Members of the staff of the Boston Evening American and the other volunteer workers in the Goodfellow Club will be glad to act as agents for any Goodfellow who cannot undertake the actual purchase or delivery of Christmas cheer to needy ones.

You may send your contribution in money, and you may designate the manner in which you wish the money spent. The Goodfellow Club will make the most careful purchases, and will deliver your gifts of food or clothing or toys to the family you designate, or, in case you make no stipulation, they will select a family whose needs have been investigated.

Goodfellows, do not be afraid to sign your name to your letters offering assistance. No advantage will be taken of the information. It will not go beyond the Goodfellow's office. The request is made in the interest of efficiency. If we cannot communicate with you, it may hamper your Goodfellow agent in placing your gifts to best advantage.

It should be understood, also, that Goodfellows may send cash donations to be applied at the discretion of the Goodfellow Editor to the relief of some of the hundreds of applicants whom it is impossible to call special attention to in these columns.

Today's letters disclose many pitiful cases of need. It just happens today that many of the letters tell of the father of the family being in the hospital.

MORE PITIFUL CASES

One young father writes from a ward in the Massachusetts General Hospital. His concern for the Christmas happiness of his wife and seven children, while he lies helpless in bed, is pitiful.

"I feel pretty despondent as Christmas is approaching, with nothing at all coming in and no hopes of when I will be well," he writes.

"Husband is in the hospital. I have four small children who need stockings and underwear," writes a Hyde Park mother.

"I am a lonely mother with two babies . . . in need of warm clothes and shoes. My husband is in the Mattapan Sanitarium," writes another who prefers clothing to toys for her babies.

Please write to the Goodfellow Editor today and ask for further details of these cases or others. Tell him what you are willing to do and he will entrust the Christmas happiness of some little family to your hands.

GLOUCESTER SCHOONER ASHORE AT LUNENBURG

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 3 (I.N.S.)—The Gloucester (Mass.) fishing schooner Bay State was ashore at the entrance of Lunenburg harbor today, having spent a night of peril.

Putting into the harbor with a cargo of 12,000 pounds of fresh fish aboard, the schooner failed to cross the Lunenburg bar at low tide, her anchors dragged and she was driven shoreward by a high wind. A hole was torn in her bottom.

Girls "Too Smart," Says One in Court on Drunk Charge

Springfield, Dec. 3 (I.N.S.)—Modern girls are too smart for their own good, declared Miss Eva Westling, twenty-one, when arraigned in court today a short time after she and Miss Mildred Randall, nineteen, and Richard Kinsella, Jr., thirty, son of ex-Mayor Richard Kinsella of Hartford, Ct., were taken from an automobile in the business district in an alleged intoxicated condition.

Miss Westling, who pleaded guilty to a drunkenness charge, asked for four months' probation, but her case and those of Miss Randall and Kinsella were continued until December 3, the latter two pleading not guilty. Kinsella also pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor.

BRIDE VANISHES IN HOSPITAL

Manchester, N. H., Dec. 3 (A.P.)—Peter Condiles of this city has appealed to Senator Moses to aid him in a search for his bride, Olga, who has mysteriously disappeared from the hospital at Ellis Island.

Early this year, the marriage was performed in Greece, the couple, after an extensive wedding trip returning to America, November 23. Because Mrs. Condiles had been seasick throughout the voyage, she was detained on Ellis Island so that she might regain her strength.

Mr. Condiles was permitted to land and hurried to Manchester to prepare the new home. It was shortly after that he learned Mrs. Condiles was no longer at Ellis Island. From the authorities there he learned she had been released from the hospital.

EATON DID NOT STEAL OWN PROPERTY, SAYS JUDGE

William R. Eaton, president of W. R. Eaton Company, Inc., of Ferry street, North End, did not steal his own property when he ordered removal of five barrels of marshmallow from his factory while there was an attachment on the place. In yesterday's Boston Evening American it was stated Eaton stole his own property and was fined $50, from which he appealed. Judge Dowd today pointed out he did not steal his own property, as it did not belong to him while the attachment was on.

Constable Robert Reed of Court street served the attachment November 8 and put a keeper in charge. This keeper was in another part of the building when the five barrels of marshmallow were taken and sold in Cambridge, and he did not authorize removal of the goods.

CHARGES ARSON TO 3 IN FIRE IN DORCHESTER

Paul Nichols, 17, of Warren street, Allston; Charles Goodstein, 37, of Normandy street, Roxbury, and Henry Cheat of Fernboro street, Roxbury, in Dorchester Court today were held for the Grand Jury in connection with an alleged incendiary fire in a three-story frame dwelling in Dorchester avenue.

Nichols was charged with arson and the others with accessory before the fact, all waiving examination and being held in $2,000.

According to State Officers John Reardon and James Trainor, Nichols confessed he was to receive $50 if he set a fire which was successful. The money was to have been paid by Cheat, owner of the Dorchester avenue building, the police quoted Nichols as saying.

Nichols and Goodstein were employed by Cheat, and according to the alleged confession, worked in the cellar of the building Wednesday afternoon, when they jimmied a cellar door and left it open. Nichols, according to the police, procured two candles setting one under a flight of stairs, with paper and excelsior heaped around it. He said he returned at 9 p. m., according to the police, and lit the candle. The alarm was given before the fire had attained much headway, and the damage was only $200.

A woman and 10-year-old child were driven out of their home by smoke. The ground floor of the building is occupied by a store, and the upper stories are used as dwellings.

THOMPSON WILL STIR UP HUB

Prepared to "give Boston such a stirring up as it has not experienced since the Boston Tea Party," Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago advocate of "America First," arrives here tomorrow for a public address in Mechanics Building.

Arrangements for handling a large crowd were made today by George E. McGrath who is in charge of plans for the meeting. Admission will be free, the lecture being under the auspices of the American Association for Recognition of the Irish Republic.

Mayor Thompson comes to Boston while still in the midst of his fight to "junk" school histories that he alleges are anti-American and pro-British, a campaign that has drawn attention to him from both sides of the Atlantic.

"I will give old Boston a speech that the folk there haven't heard the like of since the days of Sam Adams and his compatriots, stalwart, dyed-in-the-wool Americans, every one of them," he informed McGrath in a message today.

McGrath, representing Mayor Thompson personally in advance arrangements, was an alderman in Waltham before going to Chicago 36 years ago, and he expressed keen delight in being able to present the Chicago mayor to Bostonians who, in his words, are "in for a very rare treat."

The doors of Mechanics Building will open at 6:45 tomorrow evening and the lecture will begin at 8 o'clock.

ESKIMOS EXPERTS WITH NEEDLES, ASSERTS BYRD

New York, Dec. 3 (A.P.)—Six Eskimos who will go with Commander Richard E. Byrd on his South Pole expedition earned their places by reason of their exquisite needlework, he said today.

No Eskimo ever has left his igloo in the north for another 11,000 miles to the south, but Commander Byrd is not taking the six as colonizers, he said. "They may not like it when they get there," he explained, "and it doesn't matter whether they stay or not, but not a seamstress in New York can beat the polar native at sewing sealskin suits."

FACES MURDER CHARGE IN QUARREL OVER GIRL

Los Angeles, Dec. 3 (A.P.)—William Nigh, film director, today faced a charge of assault with attempt to commit murder, preferred by Edward Usher, Jr., former University of Michigan football star, who asserted the motion picture man tried to kill him "because I took his girl away from him." Gene Jarvis, actress, is assumed to be the girl.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Don't Rush Him, Boys!

In the Civil War operetta, "My Maryland," at the Shubert, Oscar Figman in his character of Zeke Bramble might be described as a thorn in the side of Colonel Negley. Zeke's quaint humor breaks out like this: "I'll tell ye what; I'm a Northern spy, but no relation to the apple."

ONCE MORE ZIEGFELD MAKES BOSTON HIS PRODUCTION CENTER FOR NEW MUSICAL

CABARET CONNIVANCE. In "Broadway" at the Plymouth, Ramona Kogan, Walter Glass and Eugene Redding talk shop in the famous Paradise Night Club. Mr. Redding objects to the word "paradise." Mr. Glass thinks, too, that it is too ambitiously descriptive.

MARILYN MILLER returns to the Colonial next Thursday evening for the first performance of Mr. Ziegfeld's brand new show, "Rosalie," with Jack Donahue

JOINING HANDS to make "Oh, Kay!" at the Majestic something to be remembered with a smile are the Cardell Twins. These blithe sprites have only recently joined the company. They dance, principally, but it is a generous share they contribute to the performance.

KITTY STARR is a talented and cheerful adjunct to the bounding burlesque entertainment known as the "Tip Top Revue," new show at the Gayety.

TWO OF A KIND, both aces, in the darkey frivolities of "Rang Tang" at the Tremont are May Barnes and Lavina Mack. Character dances are their specialties. They are noted among show-stoppers.

MASTER HANDS ARE GUIDING "ROSALIE"

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

WHEN Mr. F. Ziegfeld moves upon any objective he moves en masse. As one of the best known and most highly touted generalissimi of art, he manages, with simple gesture, to keep his lines of communication intact and his forces in good hand through the simple expedient of the biggest and busiest general staff the theatre can afford. It has been remarked that for the opening of "Rosalie" at the Colonial next Thursday not fewer than eighty doctors, nurses, melody specialists and dancing internes are going into camp at the Colonial on Monday to see that justice is done the new show and the master's orders obeyed.

WHEN Mr. Ziegfeld first decided to transfer his primary producing activities from Atlantic City to Boston there were many scoffers, we are told. This old town was geographically wrong and artistically futile, and any attempt at new tricks would be finally reckoned as just another costly experiment. Nevertheless—and why not?—Ziegfeld prevailed and gave "Rio Rita" and the newer "Follies" to a gasping, eager world at the Colonial. Locally, the idea caught on marvellously, even in midsummer, when, in this village, at least, the theatre is counted at its best non-essential. All men are urged forward by their own triumphs—even a hard-headed spendthrift in the arts. So, once more, Boylston streeet is to have an important "Ziegfeld premiere."

GIVING full credit to the principal and most generally despised sinners of our land, the drama of the spoken word and direct action appears to be doing very well. For this let due thanks be sent up for the artistic virtues of grand larceny, plain murder and indiscriminate scofflawing. You just cannot get away from it—sin and misdemeanor of both grand and mild degree are keeping the playgoers exhilarated and the theatres open. Locally we have "Broadway," combining murder with bootlegging; "Oh, Kay," a sportive blend of rum running and nocturnal festivities set to good music, and "Tenth Avenue," a plain and unvarnished tale of robbery, homicide and whatever else may turn up in the quest of a dishonest dollar. Even so excellent a play as "In Abraham's Bosom"—a distinguished prize drama selected by solemn judges of literature—finally reveals the murder of a negro for no better cause than his effort to lead his children out of the darkness.

* * *

AND so it runs in rare form. The latest example of crime versus art is discovered in Bartlett Cormack's new drama of Chicagoan iniquities, "The Racket," which is now feeding the New York ear with red hot splashes of dark deeds in the nation's second city. The critics have almost unanimously declared it a good and sound play—something to keep quiet and dignified Manhattan in tremulous accent for a season. Eventually this gripping story of gangsters and constables in Will Thompson's lively city will reach Boston, and then, undoubtedly, we shall all agree with Mr. Cormack that a first class murder is only first class when the victim is plugged in the back—Chicago style. In any event, "The Racket" is giving a worthy young author his first taste of big success. In these perilous days of a rough and ready drama, what difference does it make how you conduct your slaughter? You may even set it to music if the occasion is ripe and the buyers eager.

WICKED WORK IN WICKER

"HAVE YOU BROUGHT THE PAPERS?" frigidly inquires Barbara th of Reginald Denny. "Yes'm," he cheerfully answers, and you are beneficiary of grandfather's will." ("On Your Toes," Boston)

In New Drama

SYDNEY SHIELDS (her first name's correct), comes to the Arlington, December 12, in the new play, "Red Dust."

FEET THAT NEVER FAIL

As "every dark cloud has a silver lining," May Barnes, the little chocolate girl who dances with reckless abandon in the Miller and Lyles show, "Rang-Tang," at the Tremont, brings a ray of brightness into any entertainment in which she appears.

Two years ago she appeared in "Runnin' Wild." She was a tiny girl then, weighing scarcely eighty pounds, but when she suddenly started stepping the Charleston all the other dancers in the show were forgotten. Now this mite has grown a little and developed into a first rate comedienne.

The rakish angle of her hat over two of the largest and most unsophisticated pair of eyes that ever looked at you, an infantile face, with mouth half open as if in interrogation, Miss Barnes creates a unique type of comedienne. "Where are my wandering wits tonight?" she seems to say, walking on to the stage pigeon-toed and wearing white stockings to accentuate the awkwardness of her feet.

The audience wonders whether she is a victim of stage fright or is playing a well calculated bit, and the result is an instant burst of laughter. But when her silly, turned-in feet begin to pick up a syncopation, look out! For May just can't make that pair of feet behave and she propels a dance which some experts term the "hooch" and others the "dinner twister."

Local Theatre Men to Give Big Dancing Party

The Musical Comedy Boys will hold their fourth annual dance at the State Ballroom on Monday evening, December 5. These boys are connected with all of the local theatres. They have engaged Karl Rohde and his orchestra to play for the dancing and, as an added attraction, have secured the services of Professor Harry Wiseman and Miss Terry Moore to dance their "Society Waltz."

A large loving cup will be the incentive to the fox trotters. This prize will be presented by Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit of the "Oh Kay!" company at the Majestic.

College Girls on the Stage

By OLGA COOK

Prima Donna of "My Maryland," at the Shubert

The stage offers college girls just as satisfying a career as other forms of art or business. Year after year more girls with college training are adopting the profession of the theatre. The stage is a splendid medium for self-expression for those who have the yearning. I think that every girl who goes on the stage and who has serious intentions of winning success should have at least one year of college.

It was in college that I learned much about the theatre, plays and acting. I had studied music, both vocal and instrumental, from childhood. But it was while I was attending college that I first became enamored of the stage. I took part in college shows, and I studied French, Italian and English plays, beginning with the classical drama and concluding with Shaw and Ibsen. I studied languages with the view of entering grand opera some time.

That ambition was realized later when I became prima donna with the Society of American Singers and appeared in New York City and on tour. Although I loved college and all my associates, the time came when I had to leave. The stage idea still dominated me completely.

When I went to New York and was engaged for grand opera and light opera roles, I realized the benefit of my studies and training at college. It stood me in good stead when I appeared in "Blossom Time" and "The Student Prince." I feel fortunate in having my present part in "My Maryland" for it gives me a wonderful opportunity for acting as well as singing.

MIDNIGHT SHOW

Miller and Lyles will give a special midnight performance of "Rang Tang," at the Tremont, at 11:45 p. m. Thursday night, Dec. 8th. It is expected that a majority of players now in Boston will be present. The show will be given in its entirety with interpolated hits by guest performers.

OLGA COOK sings the role of Barbara Fritchie in the Civil War operetta, "My Maryland," at the Shubert.

STAGE KEEPS HIM YOUNG

John Young, veteran comic, in "Oh, Kay!" at the Majestic, believes that acting is not only healthy, but that it is conducive to long life.

John E. Young

"Old actors, as a rule, are hale and hearty," said Mr. Young, in discussing this subject recently, "and I do not think they take particularly good care of themselves, either. Acting keeps one young in spirit and that is a great thing. The actor always remains more or less a boy, if he is a successful actor. There is nothing that ages one so as failure, but we do not see failures on the stage. The rules of the game take care of this.

"I am sure that the actor who has won a place in the affections of theatregoers feels a certain sense of responsibility, a duty, as it were, to always give the best that is in him and this uplifts him and spurs him on. I know that I always feel that way. Between the public and myself there is an understanding. I feel it quite as definite as a written contract for me to give value received and send my audience home from the theatre fully satisfied with what they have seen."

Russian Nobleman Works His Way in Hollywood

Tragedy is often found not only in the screen roles of the players, but also in their lives.

A visitor on the set where Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky were making "The Magic Flame," on view at Loew's Orpheum next week, was struck with the appearance of one of the men on the set, known as David Mir.

This same David Mir, under the Russian name of Yousopoff, waited outside the palace of the Czars in Petrograd one Winter night in 1917 while his cousin, Prince Lazaroff, went inside, and with a small revolver ended the life of Rasputin, known as the "Black Monk" of Russia.

Suspected of complicity in this crime, Yousopoff was forced to flee. Now he is trying to make a new start in Hollywood.

PLAN CAREER OF MARILYN AT FIVE

The age of five was the crucial period in the life of Marilyn Miller. The humor of this statement is clearer to no one more than Miss Miller herself, the young star of Ziegfeld's "Rosalie," which opens at the Colonial next Thursday with Jack Donahue. But she says very definitely, however, that at five her future career was really determined.

At that early age she could do all kinds of dancing that she does now. Toe dancing, as everyone knows, is best perfected when learned early in life.

"I came from Memphis," she explains, "and my parents, who were both on the stage, decided to bring me to New York en route for a vacation. I say 'en route' because I was to meet my grandmother in New York, and she had promised to act as my guardian on an extensive trip through Europe. Though the word Paris may thrill me now, it did not mean a thing then. What I liked more than anything was kicking up my feet and making fancy steps when I heard some music that I liked. So while my family was assembled in what was then called the 'parlor,' discussing educational benefits the trip would have for me and the influence on my life, I stood at the window kicking up my heels to the sound of a passing grind organ. Well, that settled it! That moment was the crisis of my life. My grandmother noted my ability and decided I should be an actress instead of going to Europe I went on the stage."

SPALDING IS SOLOIST AT SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH.

The high spot in the Symphony program for this week's pair of concerts is the Brahms violin concerto, of which a splendid performance was given yesterday, with Albert Spalding, first soloist of the season, playing the solo violin. The rendition will be remembered however primarily as a beautiful work of ensemble, for Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, conducting in place of Serge Koussevitzky, furnished an unusually sympathetic accompaniment.

Such understanding as existed between soloist and conductor was undoubtedly due to the fact that Mr. Burgin is himself a violinist. With such a happy combination of temperaments, and with Mr. Spalding playing his solo in the very finest classical style, in the true Brahmsian vein, the performance merited the prolonged demonstration that it received from the audience.

Mr. Burgin also proved his abilities as a conductor in his own right, something more than a mere substitute to fill in while the eminent Russian leader is resting. The concert opened with a brilliant performance of Cherubini's overture to "Ali Baba," a piece which can hardly disguise its age of close to a century. Yet Mr. Burgin and the players managed to evoke from the ancient pages something of the Italianate spirit, of the lyricism in which every Italian naturally expresses himself.

Franz Schreker's "Prelude to a Drama," introduced here by M. Monteux five years ago, was the only modern number on the list. No doubt Schreker's countrymen were shocked when this piece was first played in 1914. Listening to it as it was remarkably well played yesterday, we were not concerned with its modernism, for our ears have become accustomed to far more dissonant music. But Schreker has certainly penned stirring measures, on emotional, turbulent music that says something.

Mr. Burgin could not deny himself the opportunity to place a war horse at the end of the program—Liszt's "Mazeppa." The performance could have been improved, but the piece itself might better have been left off the program. Not without reason are the Liszt symphonic poems disappearing from the modern concert-hall.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Ain't It the Truth!

Those who like to read their newspapers undisturbed will relish the scene in "Tenth Avenue," at the Hollis, where one character is so annoyed by another, who is trying to read over his shoulder, that the first reader angrily exclaims, "Where do you think you are, in the subway?"

Well, This Settles It

The weighty harangues of those darky comics, Miller and Lyles, at the Tremont, include an exhaustive discussion on no less a scientific problem than the weight of smoke. One explains to the other, "All depends on its size. A smoke like you oughter weigh about 165 pounds."

SHADOWLAND ARTISTRY IN SMILES AND TEARS DESCENDS UPON LOCAL SCREENS

IN OLDEN DAYS OUT WEST the installment collector often had to use all his weapons to separate the shekels from the yokels. Here we have Fred Kohler holding up Richard Dix and Thelma Todd in "The Gay Defender"

THE LATEST SCOTCH JOKE is the prancing team of Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton in "Now We're In The Air" at the Scollay, Olympia, Fenway, Capitol and Central.

"A MAN'S PAST" is sometimes a thing to be forgotten. Conrad Veidt and Barbara Bedford are doing it splendidly at the Modern and Beacon today.

WRANGLE ENDS IN STRANGLE. In "The Garden of Allah" at Loew's State, Ivan Petrovich and Alice Terry have a great deal of hard luck, such as sand in the spinach and no ice for the butter.

GIVING THE LITTLE GIRL A BIG HAND

By LEO GAFFNEY

THE appearance of Thelma Todd, Massachusetts girl, as Richard Dix' heroine in "The Gay Defender" today at the Metropolitan, is a good, golden-blonde indication of what Hollywood's "best minds" are doing with its "new faces." Two years or more ago the benign film fathers fired a shot that was heard around the world—they pleaded for fresh talent. Any young person of beauty and refinement could get into the movies. All you had to do was to impress certain exacting judges that you possessed these necessary qualifications.

* * *

BOSTON, at the time, was merely one of so many zones in which the country was divided for the competition. Here the local candidates assembled and hopefully met their judges. They posed and strutted (the candidates, not the judges) and let down their hair, if any. All during one long day a small group of critical gentlemen gazed until they were dazed. The dewy shades of evening were gathering thickly; the semi-comatose connoisseurs had been at it since morning. They were dinnerless. Beauty cheapened.

AT last the final candidate! The tally was quickly made, the lucky ones (a very few) were nominated and the jaded judges were reaching for their hats when—"One moment, gentlemen, here's a girl you simply must see!" An excited picture salesman, modestly followed by a stunning blonde girl and her mother, was valorously advancing with more work for those poor, unhappy umpires.

* * *

"NOTHING doing!" from one agonized arbiter, "I've had all I can stand of beauty and refinement for one day. If I see another fragment of beauty or one more segment of refinement I'll be a mere figment of the imagination. And besides, I WANNA GO HOME!"

* * *

ANOTHER refractory referee, in a similar state of collapse, was also of this determination. Another girl? Impossible! Why, hadn't he seen every feminine person in the world that day? The salesman was only joking. It must be Lon Chaney.

* * *

THEN the arbitrary arbitrators caught sight of Thelma Todd—and were immediately refreshed. The result of that little meeting may be found on the screen at the Metropolitan. Some folks up in Lawrence are pointing with pride to the dimpled heroine of "The Gay Defender." At the same time they can also point a moral: "You don't have to be mixed up in a scandal to get into the films—all you need to have is 'the goods,' the same as in any other job."

Rex Ingram Is Not Afraid of the Unhappy Ending

With the filming of "The Garden of Allah," which will be seen next week at Loew's State, Rex Ingram turns in another feature picture leaving the author's original title and ending unchanged.

Considering the number of stories which had unhappy endings before he recast them into motion pictures, Mr. Ingram's record of never having changed an important title or unhappy ending has been submitted to the Author's League of America as a world's mark.

He found "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Scaramouche," "Where the Pavement Ends" and "Mare Nostrum" with unhappy endings and left them so, making tremendous box office successes of all of them despite that fact.

With "The Garden of Allah," Mr. Ingram had a long struggle before he decided to stick to his rule of not tampering with an author's ending.

"That's one story," he insisted, "that ought to end happily."

"Why don't you change it?" he was asked.

"For the simple reason that Robert Hichens wrote the story that way."

Understudy in "Broadway" Gets Her Big Chance

Florence Marshall

The thrill that comes to every understudy who patiently waits for a chance to play an important part, was experienced this past week by Florence Marshall, the attractive Brookline high school girl who has been appearing in the cast of "Broadway" at the Plymouth.

Miss Marshall has been playing Ruby, one of the six wise-cracking and nimble-witted chorus girls of the Paradise Night Club in "Broadway." It is a minor part, more decorative then otherwise, because of the few lines allotted; but Miss Marshall has all along been understudying Mazie, one of the more important roles, and when Marguerite St. Clair was suddenly called home by the death of her father, Miss Marshall was thrust into the role at a few hours' notice. It was a trying ordeal for the young actress, but she easily made the grade.

Maybe She's Right!

Said the grim-faced, middle aged woman as she read the window card announcing "A Man's Past," at the Modern and Beacon: "Huh! From what I've seen of the men folks—and what they are pleased to call a 'past'—I should think they wouldn't care to be bragging so much about it."

STAGE AND SCREEN

Never Spring This One!

Not the least of the wise-cracking admonitions to be found in "Oh, Kay," at the Majestic, is this cryptic advice to the merry bootlegger as he prepares to settle down for the night: "And remember, please, it is hardly necessary to ring for ice water; there's springs in the bed."

AND A SPRING WITH PEACH

WHY WALLACE BERRY LEFT THE STAGE

"Some men are so cowardly they would hide behind a woman's skirts," says Wallace Beery, co-starring in "Now We're in the Air" next week at the two Olympias, Fenway, Capitol and Central. "Take me, for instance, I did. I was playing in musical comedy," he continues, singing with great gusto and making an occasional quip. Without warning I was bitten by the movie bug. When I convalesced I found myself playing Swedish housemaid roles for Essanay.

Wallace Beery

"When these comedies were released I used to spend my time in theatres laughing at myself. So I decided to be a villain. Marshal Neilan had a vacancy for a villain in "The Unpardonable Sin." After telling him several of my best jokes he hired me. I was a success at last and proud of it.

"Ambition spoiled me. I wanted to be a king. Douglas Fairbanks in a moment of arch conspiracy gave me the part of King Richard in "Robin Hood." I kinged around for weeks, finally deciding to end it all by getting married. Then I went back to villaining for Paramount and Paramount and I were both pleased by the results. We compromised by turning me into a comedian, the idea being that after making pictures for so many years it was about time for me to break into the movies."

HARVARD GLEE CLUB

The Harvard Glee Club will open its season under the direction of Dr. Archibald T. Davison with a concert in Symphony Hall, next Thursday evening, December 8, at 8:15. Frank Ramseyer will be the soloist of the occasion.

JUST A REMINDER---THEY'RE ALL ON DUTY

RUTH LEE has taken over the lone feminine role in "Tenth Avenue," at the Hollis.

GABY FAY performs a good chore for Mr. Clive in the mysterious "No. 17," at the Copley.

EDITH SPEARE and her energetic co-workers, at the St. James, will do "Lombardi, Ltd."

GALLI CURCI will raise her golden voice in recital at Symphony Hall on Sunday, December 11.

CHAMPIONS NEGROES

Not the least of the things that Paul Green and Eugene O'Neill have in common is their interest in and understanding of the negro.

There have been many who read the script of his play, "In Abraham's Bosom," now at the Arlington, and assumed that Mr. Green was a negro. When this was told to him on the occasion of his brief visit to New York for the opening of his play, he answered, "Thanks for the compliment."

Green is a native of the South and the case of the American negro has always interested him.

In his "Abraham's Bosom," the leading character is confronted with obstacles which are no idle supposition. In the Carolinas, until recent years, the following statements had an almost axiomatic validity: "Give a Nigger a book, and you might just as well kill him!"—"Educate a Nigger, and you lose a good plough hand!"—"An educated Nigger, is mean enough to hang!"—and so on. Now, thanks to many unsung Abrahams and other Paul Greens, perhaps, these things are no longer believed.

PAULINE STARKE SELECTED FOR "FALLEN ANGELS"

By LOUELLA PARSONS

Los Angeles, Dec. 2.—I just knew Pauline Starke's trick haircut meant a new part in a picture. She appeared at Billie Dove's dinner dance with a very short, very trim bob, so different that it attracted considerable attention.

The character that apparently calls for this style of hairdress is in "Fallen Angels," an Arthur Somers Roche drama, about to be filmed at Universal City.

This "Fallen Angels" has been talked of for at least six months. And now it is about to be made with Edward Laemmle handling its directorial destinies.

The surprise of "Fallen Angels" is that both Norman Kerry and Ward Crane have the important male roles. Their type is so similar and they look so much alike, it is somewhat of an experiment to put them in the same film. Mr. Kerry's role is heroic. In fact, he kills himself so that his rival can have the girl.

I wonder how Norman's public will enjoy seeing him die. He is extremely popular and they may resent his sacrifice. At least, it is a new angle, isn't it? We get used to always having the hero marry the girl.

They all come back. That is, if they care enough about pictures, and the industry really feels they are valuable. Here is Joseph Engle, at the time treasurer of Metro and chief of production in the days before Metro joined forces with Goldwyn and Louis B. Mayer.

Mr. Engle has come to Hollywood to take over the management of Caddo pictures—the place formerly held by Whitman Bennett, who returns to New York. Mr. Bennett, it seems, has another ace in the hole—another business venture that will be made public shortly.

Caddo Pictures in case you are troubled with a shortage of the memory, is the one headed by Howard Hughes, twenty-two-year-old millionaire.

Sidney Olcott bade his friends farewell yesterday and set out to eat his Christmas dinner in Paris. It isn't just the thought of eating plum pudding with old friends in the French capital at this time that takes Sidney from our midst. It is is a new contract to direct pictures for the British Lion Film Company.

Since Parliament passed the film quota law, production in England has started to pick up. Several other directors are also talking shop. The British Lion is well financed, too, and headed by Sir Edward Wallace, considered one of the most capable motion picture men in all of England.

Mr. Olcott is one of the pioneer directors and the man who made "Little Old New York," considered by many people as Marion Davies' finest picture.

Lane Chandler (I almost said Lane Bryant) is progressing. Good times have come to the Wyoming cowboy who was discovered in Yellowstone Park by a visiting motion picture company. No longer does he have to throw a lariat and show his prowess as a rider of horses. He becomes a real Easterner in Clara Bow's next picture, "Red Hair."

Most youths about to break into pictures would consider playing opposite Clara Bow, filmland's most flapperish ingenue, a real achievement. Speaking of Clara, Alice White is certainly looking like her these days.

The red hair, which Miss White declares is natural and which it seems to me was blonde a few months ago, accentuates the resemblance. Clara is slimmer—and a little taller, but there is no denying their resemblance.

Feminine Trombonist of Note at New Boston

Grayce Allen, trombonist, will appear upon the stage of the Keith Albee Boston next week. Miss Allen is famed throughout the country as the ace of feminine trombonists. She has played before critical audiences for a number of years. Miss Allen has composed pieces for the trombone that are regarded highly by leading musicians the country over, and her records for the phonograph are exceptional. This will be Miss Allen's first appearance upon a Boston stage despite the fact that she was born and brought up here.

Grayce Allen

Claims Co-Ed Is Smartest Dressed American Girl

Gaby Fay, with the Copley players, after carefully observing many American types, has decided that the charming, sophisticated college girl of today represents the best dressed and most individual class in this country.

"I think the co-ed is one of the smartest attired women in America," Miss Fay explained. "Although college girls usually keep their dresses in a certain key, there is not nearly so much uniformity about them as existed a few years ago." Miss Fay added. "Each girl seems to suit her own individuality, yet gowns herself suitably to the demands of college life."

Alice Day Means Business in the Serious Drama

Another of the steadily increasing number of young girls who are making good rapidly in the movies is Alice Day, who will be seen in "Night Life" at the Modern and Beacon, starting today. Miss Day is the sister of Marceline Day of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company. The two girls were taken to Hollywood by their mother only a short time ago. Alice was selected by Mack Sennett to appear in his comedies and she soon became featured in his "two reelers." Like many other actresses of note in the silent drama Alice Day had her start in comedy. "Night Life" is a serious drama, but Alice is ready.

Winter Sports About to Have Their Inning

ALL NORTH SHORE roads will lead to the Boston Arena on Monday evening when Red Chapman, pride of Chelsea, meets Danny Kramer, formerly of Revere, in a scheduled 10-round bout under the auspices of the Suffolk A. A. These local fistic stars have been rivals for the featherweight crown for years, but have never met in the squared circle. Their coming tussle promises to be one of the best ever staged between little men in the Hub.

SMILES WILL SOON DISAPPEAR from the faces of these young bike racers, shown going through a light workout in preparation for the annual six-day grind which starts in Madison Square Garden, New York, at midnight tonight. Bicycle racing is one of the most gruelling of all athletic pastimes, requiring both an iron nerve and iron constitution on the part of the contestant. These smiling youths possess the qualifications necessary for success, but there is little humor in their countenances once a race starts.

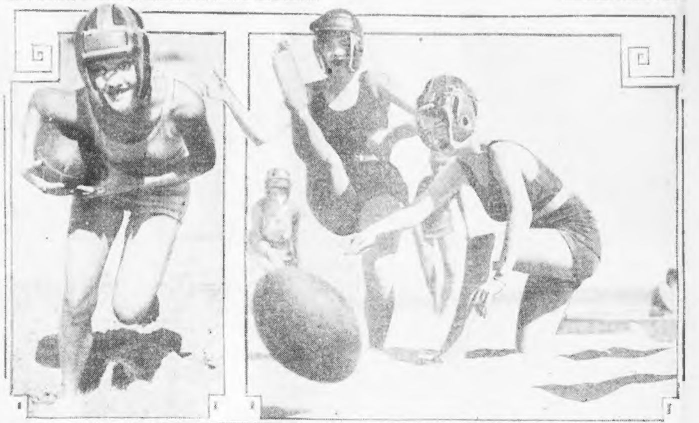
CHASE FOR CHASE is all Harvard's opponents do, for in Capt. Johnny Chase the Crimson sextet has a center who ranks with the best in college ranks, and will run any enemy ragged.



GO SOUTH, YOUNG MAN! West used to be the destination advised, but everybody has forgotten all about the wide open spaces since pictures as the one above started to arrive from Florida. This one shows a few high school beauties engaged in football on the sands. They know their grid game, these Florida fair ones, and that ain't all, according to reports. Who wouldn't travel thousands of miles to meet such fair opponents as these just for the asking? Echo answers, "Who?" Why not an encore at Nantasket or Revere next Summer?

"ROBBERY, cried "Deary" Drury, star quarterback of the Southern California eleven, in explaining the defeat of his team at the hands of Notre Dame. Umpire Schommer should have ruled a certain touchback or safety, which would have given the coast team an 8 to 7 win instead of a 7 to 6 defeat.

ALL NAME ON ALL TEAM—Smith, you know him, he plays guard for Notre Dame—and how! Good enough, at any rate, to win a berth on the majority of mythical "all" elevens. His name may be common, but his playing is anything else but. Even linemen star under the famous Knute Rockne system, which is nationally known.

PLAYER TURNS COACH. "Sonny" Foley, one of Boston College's greatest hockey stars of the past, has returned to University Heights in the role of ice mentor, much to the joy of all Eagle rooters.

TERRIER LEADER. John "Gyp" Lawless, captain of the Boston University Hockey team, is rated by many critics as the best college center ice man in New England. He is small as hockey players go-

STILL GOING STRONG. Despite the years he has spent in the game, Captain Sprague Cleghorn of the Boston Bruins is able to show most of the defense men in the N. H. L. how to play the game.

CHANNEL CRAZE bites another mermaid. Miss Esther Williams of Wilkesbarre, Pa., will try to swim the English Channel next Summer, though it has been done so often that it is no longer considered a remarkable feat.

Honeyboy Won the Decision but Dancing Honors Were About Even

FINNEGAN MISSES CROWN

1½ Pound Overweight Prevents Honeyboy Taking Title From Tod Morgan

By JACK CONWAY

ONE pound and a half of flesh is all that today prevents Honeyboy Finnegan of Dorchester from being hailed as the world's junior lightweight champion. Finnegan shaded Tod Morgan, the proud title holder, in a ten-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Mechanics Building, but didn't grab the championship as he was obliged to weigh in above the class limit of 130 pounds.

The Honeyboy and Morgan both tipped the beam at 131½ pounds.

Jack Conway

Finnegan's margin of victory was a narrow one. He carried five rounds, four went to Morgan, while the other was even.

At the finish, Morgan was carrying the fight to the Dorchester featherweight. The champion crashed his way out front in the ninth frame and held his advantage through the tenth session.

Finnegan's early margin however, was too much for Tod to cut down. He would have had to crash through with at least a clean knockdown to have gained the margin.

As it was, it was one of those bouts which would have been declared a draw in New York or Chicago. The Massachusetts boxing law requires a decision. Finnegan had the edge and so the finding of the officials was perfectly proper.

EIGHT thousand persons witnessed the scrap. It was a healthy gathering, but it would have been even larger if it had not been for the heavy rain, which kept many of the out-of-town fans at home.

For six rounds the bout wasn't anything to cheer about. Each boxer had a high opinion of his rival and they coasted along very cautiously.

Morgan kept circling to Honeyboy's right, which made it difficult for the Dorchester battler to score with his left.

Finnegan whirled out front in the opening chapter. He whizzed a terrific left hook to Morgan's chin late in the round, which was the best blow landed during the frame. Honeyboy's right stabs started the blood flowing from Morgan's nose.

Morgan stepped on it in the second frame. He kept in close and bombarded Honeyboy to the body. It was the champion's round.

Tod also outboxed Finnegan in the third frame.

FINNEGAN came on in the fourth session and had a healthy lead. He kept popping away with right hooks and jabs for the head and made Morgan miss many right handers which were intended for the chin. One of Tod's rights landed high on the head and made Honeyboy step back.

There was plenty of power behind Morgan's rights, but his direction was poor.

The fifth round also found Finnegan's right carrying away the honors. There wasn't enough action for the gallery gods and so they booed and clapped their hands.

The sixth round was even, while Finnegan carried the seventh and eighth.

THEN Mister Morgan started to fight. He tossed caution to the well-known winds, and paraded in close, where he let go left and right handers with reckless abandon. Finnegan tired under the champion's drive and was punched around rather freely. Morgan had the ninth and tenth rounds by comfortable margins.

Morgan and Finnegan each received ovations when they left the ring.

ONE Eddie Callahan of Nashua, N. H., a Frenchman with an Irish name, outscored Elzier Rioux of Canada in six rounds. Joey Conley of Dorchester was awarded the verdict over Johnny Barrett of Cambridge in six frames, while Manuel Canto of the North End outgalloped Tony Magna of the West End in four chapters.

In another one of those four-round eye-openers Joey Dwyer of Cambridge was given the decision over Frankie Moore of the North End.

In the semi-final, which went on after the main bout, Johnny Vestito, Dorchester, defeated Steve Smith of Bridgeport, in a two-handed melee. The distance was eight rounds.

Harvard Hockey Team Displays Glaring Weakness in Defense

Harvard has closed its first week of hockey with a glaring weakness in the lack of defencemen. With only one veteran defence player, Willie Howard, available, Coach Joe Stubbs has planned to shift many prospective wingmen to the point positions the coming week.

Howard is still affected by poor eyesight and his failure to shape up to the form he displayed in his sophomore year has been another cause of the shifts planned by the new Harvard mentor.

Stubbs intends to have four regular defence players to alternate at the points throughout the season. This has been his plan for the past three years and his sturdy defence during these years has been the backbone for the rise of Harvard to the college hockey crown.

BIGELOW LOOKS GOOD.

Bert Bigelow, a former Milton Academy lad is a likely looking boy for one of the defense posts. Although he has bene slow in getting away, hockey fans who know his ability predict that Harvard has a coming hockey star in the sophomore. Bigelow is built perfectly for a defense player and it will be a matter of time before he wins a regular berth in front of Goalie Joe Morrill.

The backbone of this year's Crimson sextet is found in the veteran trio of Captain Johnny Chase, Johnny Tudor and Joe Morrill. Chase and Tudor are fixtures on the Crimson first line while Morrill has been ticketed as the best goalie in the college ranks.

Bobby Giddens from Canada will team up with Chase and Tudor on the first line, from present indications. Giddens is a speed merchant and his stick-handling has featured the workouts to date. He teams along perfectly with Tudor and Chase.

The refusal of Westie Adams to join the squad is not severely felt with Morrill playing the game he is at present. Adams is a senior and doubtless he would have warmed the bench all season. His refusal to come out for hockey is far from the right college spirit, however.

PLAYS TECH NEXT FRIDAY.

Harvard plays its first game next Friday night with Technology. Coach Bill Stewart of the Engineers has been having a tough time in developing his sextette and Harvard expects little trouble from their Cambridge neighbors.

The Boston University game is the main objective right now. The Terriers have a veteran team and Harvard will undoubtedly enter the game as the underdog.

ST. JOE'S OFFER 35 FAST BOUTS

An exceptional entry list in the 135-pound class, caused no doubt by the recent popularity of the lightweight division in the Hub, has been noted for the weekly amateur boxing tournament of the St. Joseph's T. A. S. at Commercial Hall, Bowdoin square, tonight.

Eight promising 135-pound boys will make their bow tonight in this division, and as the class is for novices, the followers of the pures are sure to witness plenty of thrills. The second novice class carded for tonight will be the 147-pound division, and it is expected that there will be no less than eight contestants in this division.

In addition to the classes for novices, there will be bouts in five open classes, in which most of the topnotchers of these divisions will participate. The open classes will include 112, 118, 126, 160 and heavyweight.

Sport Editorial

Dr. John H. F. Connor, one of the examining physicians of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission, viewed the Finnegan-Morgan bout in the capacity of a spectator. Under ordinary conditions, he would have been the examining physician for the show.

Dr. Connor was consulted in a private capacity by Jack Sharkey at the time the latter suffered an injury to his left hand. He agreed with the finding of Dr. Martin H. Spellman of St. Elizabeth's Hospital to the effect that Sharkey had suffered an injury to a small bone in his left hand.

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission, acting on the request of the New York Commission, had Sharkey examined by another one of its doctors. This physician confessed he didn't know how to interpret an x-ray plate and so called in outside help. The Commission's doctor submitted a negative report even though he did not interpret the x-ray plate himself.

The official finding of the Massachusetts Commission was made to look very ridiculous when Dr. Walker, a brother of the Mayor of New York, and Dr. Baldwin, representing the New York Commission, upheld the original finding of Dr. Spellman and Dr. Connor.

This apparently did not please our local fistic fathers. So Dr. Connor was benched, while the doctor who was sent on the Sharkey mission by the Commission was given another soft job. Incidentally, this same physician worked at the recent Suggs-Donahue show.

Dr. Alfred Guinnell is also a licensed official. He is capable at his profession, but for some unknown reason is not given much opportunity to examine boxers.

It would seem that the boxing papas should do a little explaining.

A doctor should not be punished merely for being competent.

Speedy Tigers After Sixth in a Row

By BILL GRIMES.

One of the largest gatherings of the season is expected to witness the meeting of the undefeated Boston Tigers and the champion Springfield Indians of the Canadian-American League tonight at the Boston Arena.

Due to their five consecutive victories, the Tigers have developed a following which will tax the Arena. The Tigers are the outstanding sextet in the Canadian-American League.

Capt. Herb Rheaume, Ponzi Contant, George Redding and Bob Taylor are the only players Manager Eddie Powers retained from his 1926 aggregation. These veterans won their spurs last season, but with the exception of Captain Rheaume they are being pressed hard by the new [illegible].

Manager Powers will start his veteran wings, Redding and Taylor, flanking Joe Contant. This line is fast and strong defensively but, with the exception of Joe Contant, has displayed little scoring power. The second line will find Eddie Burke at centre ice, with Son Manning and Frost on the wings.

DOUBLE BARRELLED DEFENSE.

In Reggie Mackey and Eddie Oatman, the Tigers have a double barrelled defense. Mackey and Oatman have been doing most of the scoring for Manager Powers, the former's offensive playing being particularly brilliant.

Mackey is exceptionally fast and packs a shot equal to that of any player in the professional game. Due to his ability to break with equal effectiveness, either to the left or right upon reaching a defense, Mackey is one of the hardest men in the game to play.

He is a left hand shot, but when shooting from the right wing, his back hand drive not only travels at a terrific pace, but is low and almost impossible to stop.

Captain Herb Rheaume has played a most sensational brand of hockey this season. His work in the nets has featured every game and the fast skating, hard shooting Indians will find the Tiger leader a hard man to beat.

INDIANS HAVE NEW POWER.

Although Springfield carried off the honors last season, due in a large measure to an off color decision in a game against the Tigers, they have not been going so well this Fall.

The acquisition of "Scotty" Cawkill and "Yip" Foster will doubtless strengthen the Indians. Cawkill and Foster played their first professional game against New Haven on Thursday, but as they had only been on skates twice before that contest didn't showed to advantage.

The Tigers have scored one victory over the Indians this season, and Manager Powers charges will strive to duplicate that feat and incidentally hang up their sixth consecutive win, a new record for Canadian-American League hockey.

Nat Agar's Brooklyn Wanderers will be the Woodsie's opponents at Walpole street today in an American League game that should attract one of the largest crowds of the season.

This will be the Wanderers first visit to the local grounds this season a visit that has been long looked for by local fans due to the brilliant displays of the famous Brooklyn eleven on former appearances. Brooklyn is playing better than ever this year and have only dropped 4 out of 20 games played.

With a total of fifty-two goals scored, which i the highest average of the present race it is evident that the strength of the Maroon and White lies in their attack, which is comprised of Adair, Curtis, Nelson, Eisenhoffer and Yule.

BIG LEAGUERS OFF FOR DALLAS

Chicago, Dec. 3 (A.P.).—The main body of the major league ivory hunters departed for the Dallas player market and minor league baseball meeting today, following the trail of Commissioner K. M. Landis, and the American Association club owners whose special train left yesterday.

E. S. Barnard, the American League's new president, took along some of his old associates in the Cleveland club, and expects Billy Evans, the Indians' new general manager, to join them later.

Joe McCarthy, manager of the Chicago Cubs, arrived from his home in Buffalo in time for a short conference with his new outfield Kiki Cuyler, before leaving for Dallas to look over the crop of third basemen.

Scheinfain Named Newton Grid Leader

Everett Scheinfain, star end of the Newton High eleven, was today elected to lead the Garden City team next Fall. He tied with Captain Cole for the job last year, but resigned in favor of his rival because the latter was a junior at the time. His election today was unanimous.

GENE A MASTER OF SPOKEN ENGLISH

By BILL RADOS.

Gene Tunney last night on the radio proved himself as slippery battling the English language as he is when in the ring. Soap sponsored the broadcast, so Tunney's slipperiness was in order. But it was no soap.

Dempsey must have been lost far in the rear if he tried to follow Gene, who shot five and ten-syllable words around just as if he was used to them. Politicians, lawyers and preachers expressed wonder and amazement, and then gave up.

Although the broadcast was scheduled at 10:30 p. m., Tunney did not crawl into the mike until 10:45 p. m.

As soon as the announcer introduced him Gene started with a choice selection of left and right approved dictionary words. All through the ten-minute grind he kept this up, neither ducking nor faltering as he grappled with the unusual situation.

Then Gene scored his knockout. He said fighters were divided into many classes; the dull, highly nervous, imaginative, the sluggish and the lethargic.

This put at rest all notions that there were only Dempsey and Tunney.

Prominent college presidents, secretaries and mayors who heard the broadcast got completely lost after the words "phlegmatic," "lethargic," "premeditated" and "contest" instead of "fight." Where Tunney found all those strictly pronounceable words mystified college aspirants to championship.

Gene Tunney last night showed he really was the well read, cultured fighter the writers have pictured him. He probably was in a dress suit, felt at home and showed by his language he couldn't have been putting on the dog.

Tunney is used to speaking real English, and it will take more than broadcasting to trip him there.

Schalk Likely to Stay as Sox Pilot

Chicago, Dec 3 (A.P.).—The nearest to an announcement that Ray Schalk will manage the Chicago White Sox again next year was the statement from White Sox headquarters today that Schalk will accompany a party of Sox officials to the minor league convention at Dallas next Monday.

Pressed for a definite statement on the managership, President Charles A. Comiskey said there was no need for any announcement about the Sox manager "with an incumbent."

Schalk spent a vacation after the close of the season at Comiskey's camp in the Wisconsin woods, but no definite statement of his selection as 1928 pilot followed.

The annual N. E. A. A. U. 10-mile championships, individual and team will be held at Quincy this afternoon under the auspices of the Italian-American A. A. The start and the finish will be at Quincy square.

New England's leading middle distance and long distance runners are entered in the meet. They will make an attempt to lower the record of 53 minutes, 17 seconds which is 17 years old and was made by Lucas.

A few of the outstanding men entered are Clarence H. DeMar, Jimmy Hennigan, Gus O'Neil, Leo Lermond, James Zinck, George Dodge and Gus Barbato.

COURTNEY WITHDRAWS FORFEIT AND CHALLENGE

By the Associated Press

George Courtney, Oklahoma boxer, has withdrawn a $2,500 deposit and a challenge for Mickey Walker's middleweight crown from the New York State Athletic Commission. Displeased by the suggestion of the boxing solons for Courtney to box Jack McVey, negro pugilist, in a middleweight elimination bout, Paddy Mullins, manager of the Oklahoman, has taken back the defi, and at the same time turned down a tentative match with McVey.

Inside Golf

By Chester Horton

The first few attempts with the golf club, or even years of unsuccessful attempts with it, should prove to the golfer that a re-education of the body muscles is absolutely necessary for the difficult and laborious task of smoothing out the effort of swinging so it becomes more or less a natural, instinctive exertion. It is, for the first 100 years or so, entirely an unnatural action, like wagging one's ears at the professor shouldn't be knocked off his camp stool with a text book because at the end of the first week, you cannot do it. It takes practice and one of the rewards is that this practice, done at home or office or anywhere else, is splendid exercise. Until the feeling of pronounced resistance about the waist is overcome through practicing, the golf swing will not be smooth and free from body "back pressure," which is nothing but physical interference with your mental desire to do a thing.

TUNNEY IS BLUFFING SAYS TEX

Rickard Will Give Champion Dozen Fights in 1928 if He So Desires

New York, Dec. 3 (A.P.).—Tex Rickard threw down the gauntlet to Gene Tunney today with a proposition that will permit the heavyweight champion to fight a "dozen times in 1928 if he really wants to."

Answering [illegible] that he will [illegible] only three [illegible] in the coming year—one [illegible] Rickard [illegible] perhaps, for some other [illegible] the czar of Madison Square Garden declared that Tunney only has to choose his opponents to [illegible] all the bouts he wants [illegible] this Winter.

"If Tunney [illegible] to [illegible] off the ring rust that he says brought about the long count [illegible] Jack Dempsey, [illegible] then he can have them [illegible]," Rickard declared.

"All he has to [illegible] the Garden [illegible] end—3[illegible] per cent [illegible] and I'll put him on [illegible] His earnings will be [illegible] return from the one fight [illegible] September that netted [illegible] million dollars, but if he is [illegible] earnest the financial aspect of the thing will not deter him."

TUNNEY BLUFFING.

"But Tunney [illegible] himself when he [illegible] weight championship [illegible] a year. Gene [illegible] one was enough [illegible] any more. There is a $10[illegible] purse in [illegible] one show like that can be put on in a season.

"This offer would allow Tunney to comply with the regulations of the New York boxing commission that requires a champion to defend his title at least once every six months."

Although Rickard's contract with the champion binds Tunney for only one fight in 1928, that contest can be held any time up until October, the promoter said, and would [illegible] as a bar to Tunney's seeking matches elsewhere unless a new agreement was reached.

Rickard said he could not stage a "real championship show" before next July or August at the earliest, the very time that Jack Dempsey has approved for his third title bout with Tunney, although this match is not yet beyond "discussion" stages.

CONFERS WITH FLYNN

Rickard had a conference yesterday with Leo P. Flynn, Dempsey's manager in the comeback campaign that ended in defeat at Chicago and [illegible] count' [illegible] appears to have set the [illegible] meeting of the former Manassa Mauler" and Tunney.

Flynn was ready to wager "all the tea in China" that Jack will fight the marine again next Summer and under his tutelage and already, he announced, a plan of battle has been arranged that cannot but result in spectacular victory for the former titleholder.

Apparently [illegible] match was made in the [illegible] Flynn and Rickard agreed to [illegible] three weeks' vacation together this Winter in Florida. Tunney will spend part of the Winter in Miami.

HE NOW COURTS MUCH APPLAUSE

This is not Two Gun Bill Hart bound for location but the most colorful figure in tennis, Bill Tilden, who plays the Hobo in a local production. Bill always had a fine defense. This picture shows his defense against the Wintry blast with his woolen scarf and ulster.

Big Bill sees little hope of the U. S regaining possession of the Davis cup unless our players go abroad and get acclimated to the style of foreign play and the weather Tilden has great faith, however, in the young Yankee players of today.

Bill Tilden Here; Is in Tennis Gloom

By GEORGE W. GRIMM.

"Kathleen Mavourneen" may become the national anthem of American tennis players in quest of the Davis Cup, that symbol of net supremacy which now rests in Paris.

For, according to no less an authority than William T. Tilden, actor, author and tennis player of parts, it may be for years, and it may be forever before the Davis Cup returns home to the land of its donor.

It may be that Mr. Tilden was a bit pessimistic when met at the Copley Plaza [illegible] Boston. Even as American representative. It was a rather [illegible] day.

[illegible] Mr. Tilden [illegible] "All Want [illegible] will appear [illegible] In this show Mr. Tilden is a hobo.

At any rate, Mr. Tilden is pessimistic about America's chances of bringing back the cup next year, or the year after or even after that.

YANKS SHOULD GO ACROSS

Unless American players go to Europe [illegible] and learn more about European style of play.

Upon this single point Mr. Tilden was emphatic. He was very emphatic. He wanted this fact understood clearly. And as Mr. Tilden knows what he is talking about in matters of tennis, his words are worth heeding.

The United States will not get anywhere in a hurry unless American players invade Europe for the Davis Cup. They cannot expect to play their Davis Cup preliminary matches in the American Zone [illegible] then expect to go to France and defeat the French stars.

Mr. Tilden was getting more enthusiastic at every word. "I repeat and you can make it as strong as you wish, that the only chance to develop a winning group of players [illegible] a team that can bring back the Davis Cup is to [illegible] their matches in Europe.

YOUNG PLAYERS THE HOPE.

Notes of the Schoolboys

The one and only post-season schoolboy football class will take place this afternoon when Winchester High meets Amesbury High on the latter's school gridiron.

Both teams boast fine records, Amesbury going through the regular season undefeated and untied and Winchester losing but one game. The tissle between the two should be a thriller if the weather conditions are at all suitable.

The undefeated [illegible] Dedham team has not been scored upon this season, but with Bud Dower of B. C., and Eddie Ahern of Lehigh, together with other college stars on the Norwood team, this record may be smeared. Benny Murray, Norwood coach, will referee the game.

CHAMPION TO FIGHT HERE

For the second time in eight days Boston [illegible] fans will get a glimpse at a world's champion, when Sammy Mandell [illegible] lightweight king and regarded as the [illegible] of the Ring" classes with Jimmy Sacco of East Boston in the feature ten-round bout of the A[illegible] A. Mandell is about the only lightweight who ever held the title who has not fought in this city.

PASSING THE PUCK

By Bill Grimes

Had President Charles F. Adams seen Hago Harrington in action against the Springfield Indians, he would have seen cause for recalling the Melrose boy to the Bruins. Yale paid a fine tribute to Frank Synnott's ability as a referee when it invited the former United States Olympic team player to act in all games played by the Bulldogs this season. Dempsey to Tell Inside Story of Chicago Fight

In a series of six signed articles, Jack Dempsey, for the first time since the BATTLE OF SOLDIERS' FIELD, breaks silence and tells in his own words "without fear or favor" how CHAMPION TUNNEY "got away with" the fight.

This is the story that millions of Dempsey fans and other millions of sport followers have been waiting for. Everybody else has had his say—Dempsey has remained mum. Now he SPEAKS OUT, and what he has to say about "Long Count" Tunney, and what took place inside the ropes unknown even to the ringside seat holders, makes a startling expose that will shake Fistiana to its foundations.

Dempsey's own story begins next Monday in the Boston Evening American.

One player who is certain to be picked for any All-American team worthy of the name, is Benny Oosterbaan, the great Michigan end. Oosterbaan was a stonewall on the defense, and one of the greatest receivers of a forward pass that the game has ever known.

CLAIM MINISTERS LACK TRAINING

Many ministers lack training in social service, according to testimony gathered at a convention of social workers in Buffalo. In commenting on sentiment expressed, the Federal Council [illegible] says:

"It was the social workers' testimony that while the physician or the lawyer or the psychiatrist seems to know just what to do in providing medical, legal, and mental aid, a minister often seems quite unable to diagnose the situation and apply the remedy. He might make a visit to the family and invite them to come to church or Sunday School, or he might offer to provide food or clothing or raise some money for hospital expenses, but he seemed quite unable to attack the case in all its aspects and work continuously upon it until its spiritual problems were solved."

"39 EAST" IS SOON TO BE PRODUCED HERE

The Young People's Fellowship of Trinity Church will present their annual play in St. Andrew's Hall, Clarendon street, next Friday evening. "39 East," is the play to be given, with a cast of thirteen young people.

The Power of Youth

ALL our inheritance, our riches, our culture, our religion, our hopes of a Kingdom of Heaven upon Earth are about to fall into the hands of youth.

They arise on every hand, strong, vigorous, aspiring, confident of great achievement, an army of energy and determination and bent on great things. Who shall stay the onward march of youth? Who shall cause them to stumble, and bar their way to prevent finding out by experience how best to express their finer visions? Make way and give them sufficient freedom to work out salvation, while age stands by to counsel and to guide.

There are greater flights to be made than even Lindbergh conceived in his glorious example of what youth can do in the freedom of an open sky. There is a spiritual sky for which modern youth is preparing and dreaming, and into which he is bound to fly, if age, tradition, ancient bigotry and narrow-mindedness let go their blighting grip.

The aeroplane, the wireless, the speed boat and the whirring motor are but symbols, sign posts as it were, to what youth will achieve in the land of the spirit when once the way is cleared, the gate open and the signal given.

Oh youth, your city needs you, for it now stands broken into prejudices, greed and misunderstandings.

Oh youth, your country needs you, for many narrow national ideals and visions hold anchor to ancient rocks while winds of heaven fill out the sails and strain at chains.

Oh youth, the world needs you, with battlefields scarce dry from fratricidal strife, with nations hesitating to pledge eternal friendship and human blindness unable to see the greatness of other races.

Demand your rights, oh youth, to make a better world than your fathers placed within your hands, and future ages will bless you for your courage and your wisdom to build a finer world upon the best that has been handed you from ages past.

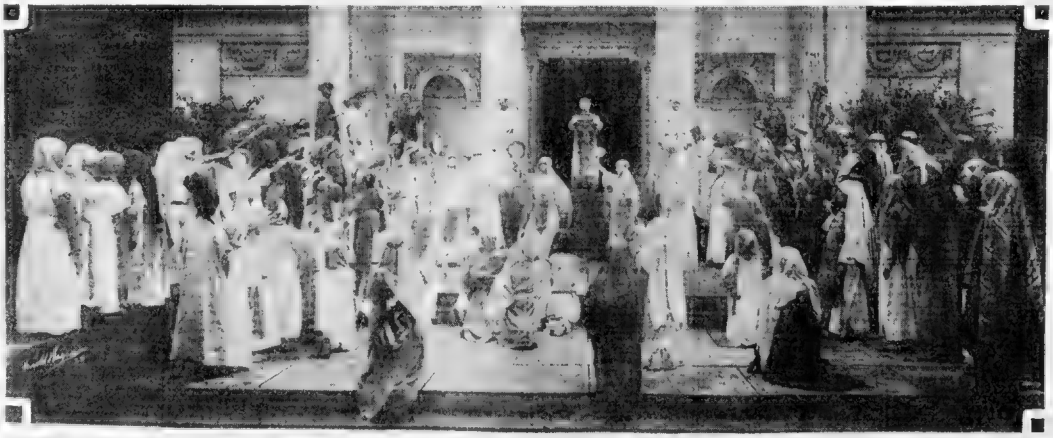
COL. LOCKE AND Y. M. C. U.

Frank L. Locke, president of the Young Men's Christian Union for twenty years, surprised his friends last Tuesday by announcing his resignation on account of poor health. Mr. Locke has seen hundreds and thousands of young men pass through his institution. The Union has stood, and does stand for innumerable good times to innumerable children of the city. This work, however, is aside from that dealing with the youth of Boston through a well-equipped and well-directed downtown gymnasium. The employment bureau helps large numbers of out-of-work men and boys to jobs. The Union was the first institution of its kind to establish evening classes. Frequently dramatic clubs have flourished with the use of the hall and stage for practice and performance. The Union has done much to advise and direct those who were at a loss to know how to solve certain human problems in a large city.

Christmas usually sees hundreds, and during the years thousands of youngsters headed toward the Y. M. C. U. to celebrate.

During the war the Union was practically turned over for recruiting activities. Classes in photography have gained well won notoriety. Thousands of citizens of Boston and of other cities bless the Christian Union. The institution at No. 48 Boylston street will be handicapped by the loss of Mr. Locke, and the directors are on the search for a worthy successor.

Religious Pageant of Color and Music by State Y. M. C. A.



Professor Augustine Smith of Boston University has written and rehearsed "The Gateway to Good Will," which will be given a presentation in the Malden High School auditorium this evening. Delegates to the annual boys' conference of the Y. M. C. A. of Massachusetts and Rhode Island will assume the parts in this pageant, which will call for 110 participants. The seven scenes represent seven national and world religions coming eventually to good will for all through the Christian gateway. The conference, which began yesterday, will continue through tomorrow.

2,500 MEMBERS OF CATHOLIC NIGHT SCHOOL

The Young Men's Catholic Association, with headquarters at No. 41 East Newton street, Boston, is fifty years old and has developed along educational, social and religious lines with special emphasis on its evening school, which has grown from a membership of 160 men in 1878 to a present school attendance of [illegible] men and women, drawn from 100 cities and towns, several of which are fifty miles distant.

The association now numbers 40 [illegible] retreat of all men members is held at the Church of Immaculate Conception. From a start [illegible] the retreat now numbers 50[illegible].

In the school, which occupies thirty class rooms of Boston College, a large number of branches are taught, from business English to sales management. There are thirty-three courses, most of which are planned to make men and women more efficient in their work, or prepared to take higher paid employment. Accounting, several branches of mathematics, advertising, literature, French, Latin, penmanship, social service, typewriting are among subjects taught by experts drawn from business and Boston College High School.

The school draws no line of creed or race, and the fees are very moderate. There is debating, a glee club and many lectures by noted people from outside the city. The annual reunion of the association held in Symphony Hall is one of Boston's most notable gatherings.

The Sisterhood of Temple Israel will conduct a two days' fair at The Elysium Club, No. 218 Huntington Avenue, next Tuesday and Wednesday. There will be dancing each evening with the Hotel Ritz orchestra. A supper at the restaurant is another feature promising to be popular.

CHURCH BUDGET DAY SET FOR TOMORROW

For scores of parishes in Greater Boston and throughout New England, tomorrow is one of the most important days of the year. For Episcopals it is the end and the beginning of the church year.

Congregationalists also make the first Sunday in December a day of promise for the year to come.

In hundreds of churches tomorrow will be a time for the every member canvass, and raising the yearly budget. Teams are organized, and immediately after church and the Sunday dinner, men and women circulate through the parish getting pledges.

Business methods are rapidly taking the place of haphazard giving. Gifts are solicited in a majority of instances with a definite understanding what the money will be used for.

In the Boston Episcopal diocese, 35 per cent. goes for home and local missionary work and overhead, and 65 per cent. for foreign and distant missionary efforts.

QUOTAS FIXED.

An example of church efficiency and business-like methods is illustrated by the Winchester Congregational Church that sent its forty teams out last Sunday after church, and raised $39[illegible] in two hours.

Trinity Church will be out next week for contributions and pledges, as will the Eliot Church, Newton, and the Congregational Church, Quincy. Of the [illegible] churches in Bishop Slattery's diocese, 1[illegible]7 will have every member canvassed and [illegible] in other ways raise the yearly budget. The quota each church is to contribute to the general work of the diocese is based on the amount of local church expenditures averaged for five years.

Because of the nature of the day's program many ministers will preach on the value of church work, the place of parish activities, and the need for help in foreign fields.

WILL RAISE MONEY.

The Rev. Eric Lindh of the Bethany Church, Quincy, will tomorrow emphasize the meaning of church life to the community. The Rev. Thomas Bruce Bitler of the Prospect Hill Congregational Church, Somerville, will preach on "The Sleepers" in an effort to awaken those who slumber in the service of the Lord.

The Rev. R. A. Eusden of Eliot Church, Newton, will have forty teams busy tomorrow with two men in each team. Preliminary work has been done, and each parishioner has received a personal appeal by mail. Dr. Eusden will preach on "The Advent of Jesus."

FEDERAL COUNCIL FOR WAR OUTLAWRY

The administrative committee of the Federal Council of Churches at its last meeting passed a resolution looking to the outlawing of war and favoring international treaties standing against war. The resolution:

(a) "To renounce war between the signatories as an instrument of national policy and to regard it henceforth as an illegitimate method of attempting to secure national objectives, it being expressly understood that this agreement does not prevent them from self-defence in case of attack.

(b) "To submit to suitable international tribunals for peaceful settlement, just so far as possible, every dispute between such signatories which cannot be solved by the usual methods of diplomacy, it being clearly understood that even in regard to disputes which they may not be willing to submit to international tribunals they will, nevertheless, not resort to war."

SALLY'S SHOULDERS

by Beatrice Burton

Author of "The HOLLYWOOD GIRL" ETC–

The Story of a Clever Boston Girl and Her Temperamental Sister

READ THIS FIRST

SALLY JEROME, 20, is the mainstay of her family. Her father had run away. Besides Sally there are the twins, BEAU and MILLIE, aged 21. Millie, the family beauty, is always losing her jobs when employers "get gay" with her.

Sally works at home in the mornings, for her mother is a semi-invalid. In the afternoons she works for MR. PEEVEY, an elderly eccentric, who does a small mail-order business in Chauncy street. TED SLOAN lives with his mother in the flat below the Jerome flat in Hemenway street. When he tries to make love to Sally she pulls him up short. Sally sees a handsome man in the elevator. She learns that he is John Nye, with an office across the hall. Ted proposes to Sally, but she promises her mother not to wed him. Sally tells Millie that Nye needs a stenographer. Sally's funds are nearly gone. Ted again talks marriage. Ted calls again, arriving just as Millie's "sweetie"—named Davidson—arrives to take her out for the evening. Beau works in a bank and Sally wonders where he gets all the money he has had lately. John Nye tells Sally he will employ Millie, but that he prefers Sally. Millie leaves her mother, desperately sick, and goes to meet Nye. Sally calls a doctor. Sally asks Beau and Millie to pay their board. Beau says his money troubles are driving him crazy.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER XVII.

AUNT EMILY had no use, whatsoever, for young Ted Sloan.

He was, she said, her idea of just nobody at all!

Her sharp eyes went over him now, taking him in [illegible] from his red hair [illegible] with grease until it looked like tan leather, to his too-loud necktie and his too-wide trousers.

"All dressed up and no place to go, aren't you?" she snapped [illegible]. Then she turned her back squarely and impolitely upon him and spoke to her niece.

"You didn't tell me your mother was feeling badly," [illegible] tingly. "What's [illegible]?" Aunt Emily always said that Sally kept things from her, and this was more or less true.

She kept all the unpleasant bits of news from her [illegible] of protecting the [illegible] Aunt Emily's [illegible]

"There's nothing [illegible] with her, Aunt [illegible] to say. "But [illegible] tonight for supper [illegible] some of it and it upset her [illegible] ach."

"I'm all right now though," came Mrs. Jerome's voice from the [illegible]. "I wasn't very sick, anyway— Just for a minute I thought I was going to be."

"Just long enough to spoil Sally's plans for the evening," remarked Aunt Emily with a frank laugh. "I know you, Margaretta!—I remember how you kept me home from a party once upon a time when you were first married and still living in the old house . . . [illegible] you were [illegible] it was too late for me to go. Just because you were angry at not being invited."

Mrs. Jerome's face seemed to wilt like a faded pink flower for an instant under Aunt Emily's stinging words. [illegible] brightened up as she spoke again.

"Now [illegible] Sally to eat and dance tonight. She'll only be young once, you know. And you and I'll go out and see a show somewhere. I'll get a taxi so you needn't walk."

The prospect of an evening out [illegible] Mrs. Jerome more [illegible] and she let Sally help her [illegible] and lace up her [illegible].

"You don't need to call a cab," Ted said to Aunt Emily with a grand air. "I'll take you wherever you're going in my own car."

And so the four of them started out together, squeezed into his little rattling roadster.

Of all the dance places in town the one Ted Sloan liked the best was "The Blue Lagoon."

"The Blue Lagoon" got its name from its azure walls with waves and gold-fish painted upon them, and from its deep sapphire-blue ceiling studded with star-like electric lights.

There was an orchestra that spun out a magic web of jazz music from 8 to 12 o'clock six nights a week too; and a large pale-yellow floor that was like clouds under hundreds of young rhythmic feet.

All of this splendor could be had for a small sum—and that, after all, was the thing that endeared "The Blue Lagoon" to the heart of young Mr. Ted Sloan. For, like millions of other young men across the broad United States, he wanted to show his best girl a good time on Saturday night and did not have much money to spend doing it.

Moreover there could not be a better place to spend an evening from the viewpoint of romance. For everything about the "Lagoon" spelled romance with a capital R—the soft lights, the low disturbing music, the hundreds of couples drawn into each other's warm, eager young arms for the dance itself.

Ted Sloan sang the chorus of a love song low in Sally's ear as the orchestra beat out the slow measures of the last waltz of that last Saturday night in September. "'My love is for you alone—'" you know, Sally." His mouth was against the dark cloud of her hair.

"Oh stop!" said Sally, sharply. "Be yourself, Ted." She was in no mood for love making tonight of all nights. She never was in a mood for Ted's caresses, for the matter of that.

"And now!" Ted answered shortly and crossly. But he took his face away from her hair and began to whistle the love song to himself instead of singing it longingly in her ear. And that, Sally told herself thankfully, was a blessing.

She looked up at his face as the music came to an end and they stopped dancing. It had lost its look of tenderness and was grim and unsmiling.

"There was something that I was going to keep to myself," he said, unlocking his arm from hers and putting one hand in his trousers pocket. "But I don't think I will."

He drew a pink slip of paper and a [illegible] from his pocket.

He handed her the pink slip, and she looked at it under the starry lights in the blue ceiling. It was a check for $110 made payable to Beauregard Jerome and it was signed with Ted's name.

"But I thought you said you lent Beau only ten bucks," said Sally, trying to speak lightly. But a fear, heavy and cold as chilled steel, had settled down over her heart.

"Yes, I did," Ted answered, steering her through the crowd by her shoulders. She hated the feeling of his hands on them, but she left them there. "But he altered it—and collected a hundred dollars more!—Men have gone to jail for less, Sally!"

Then, in the brightness of the hall outside, he showed her the other check—the pale blue one. It was Beau's check and it was for a hundred and ten dollars, too!

"He gave me that check in payment," Ted said coldly. "I told him I'd say nothing if he'd pay me back . . . His check came back to me marked 'N. S. F.' . . . The dirty crook!"

"What does 'N. S. F.' mean?" Sally asked mechanically, looking down at the letters on Beau's check. She had expected something like this for weeks. But now that it had actually come she was stunned.

"It means that he didn't have sufficient funds in the bank to cash a check like that," the boy explained. "He knew it when he gave it to me. He tried to 'gip' me twice!—Well, I'm not through with him, let me tell you! I'll put him where he belongs. I'd been months saving that hundred dollars!"

In the bright light his good-looking face with its gray eyes and red hair, seemed suddenly rat-like and mean to Sally. Whether it was a trick of the lighting or whether it really was rat-like at times, she couldn't tell.

"Oh, Ted, you wouldn't do anything to—hurt Beau, would you?" she asked, and unconsciously her hands were clasped on her breast as if she were praying. Her eyes were soft and bright and wide with fear and her mouth trembled.

But Ted was not looking at her. He was looking down at the two slips of paper—the two frail bits of paper that could mean so much agony and punishment to Beau.

"I don't know why I should be so darned soft about this thing," Ted said in a hard bitter tone. "None of you people ever treated me like a human being. You tell me not to touch you when you know I'm wild about you . . . . Your aunt treats me as if I were dirt under her feet and your mother pretends she's sick to keep you from going out with me—"

"Oh, Ted, that's because she doesn't want me to marry you. She's so afraid that I will," Sally was beginning when he cut her short.

"Well, will you?" he asked, turning on her sharply. "It's all up to you—if you'll say the word, I'll tear these checks up this minute!" He held them between his fingers, and she saw that he meant what he said.

She looked him straight in the eyes and shook her head.

"No," she said quietly. "Beau would be the last person on earth to want me to do such a thing. He rather take his medicine."

Ted laughed a nasty laugh. "He would, would he? Don't fool yourself—Ask him tonight, and see! Ask him!"

Sally turned on her heel and walked into the women's dressing room where a hundred girls were struggling to get to the mirror to put fresh make-up on their smooth, fresh faces.

When she came out he was waiting for her, puffing stolidly on a cigarette. Under his arm was his new gray felt hat with a loud scarlet-and-blue silk band.

It seemed to Sally as if she never had loathed anything or anybody quite so much as she loathed him and his loud hat-band at that particular moment . . . It seemed to typify him and everything that he stood for in some obscure, half understood way.

He turned and put out a hand towards her, touched her arm.

"Ready?" he asked.

But she shook him off, glared at him with two great angry eyes, and started out of the dance hall alone. Then suddenly she turned on one of her light heels, and swung back to him for a second. She flung one sentence at him:

"I'll see that Beau gives you that money tonight, if I have to go out and steal it myself!" said Sally.

Monday—Sally gets the money to save Beau, but—see what happens.

Martha Lee Declares Syrup a Household Necessity

By MARTHA LEE.

"WHAT delicious marshmallow frosting," exclaimed a visitor to the Martha Lee Kitchen last Saturday, commenting on the Devil's Food Cake that I had just completed.

ON "A WOMAN'S EDUCATION"

Some women USED to wonder
Whether it were better to have LOVED and LOST than never
To have loved at all.
But modern girls spend
LESS time in THOUGHT and
More in action; and most of Them appear to THINK
That it is even BETTER to
Have loved a SHORT man than
Never to have loved a TALL.
For today, the verb TO LOVE
Is conjugated pretty CASUAL.
And losing a man's LOVE is
Little more than losing a
GLOVE. It's annoying, because
In both cases, there's one—
LEFT. But then, again,
It is an EXCUSE for
A new pair, or another AFFAIR.
MOST people look on Love as an EMOTION—some
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible] they
PLAY [illegible] CONSTANTLY.
Love is [illegible]
Of a woman's EDUCATION.
To have loved WELL is
To be [illegible], while
To [illegible]
To be [illegible] CULTURED.

Correct Manners---By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

The question has arisen between my husband and me as to whom should introduce friends who drop in when we have other friends at the house. Should my husband or I do the introducing?

2. If the group is made up of men and women, do we introduce the women to each other first and then the men, or just how should we go about making everyone acquainted with the rest of the crowd? This has always been an awkward situation with us, and I would appreciate your advising me as to what is proper.

3. Also, what is correct to say when a gentleman guest thanks me for a dance?

4. When guests thank me for a dinner I have served them, or for a pleasant evening spent at my home what should I say?

A READER.

IT is better if you, as the hostess, do the introducing. However, if you are sometimes busy with serving affairs, it is correct for your husband to do the introducing.

2. Group introductions always are difficult. I know how you feel. Because they are so difficult and oftentimes seem so "forced," people often introduce a person only to the few standing near the introducing person. Then, of course, as the party progresses and people change from one part of a room to another, the person is introduced to other guests. However, this is in a very large party. If you wish to make the introductions to every guest, introduce one woman, first to the other women and then introduce the men to her. This is easier than it sounds, for after the first introduction or the first two introductions it will be necessary only to mention the name. Indeed, practically all of the introductions may be made with the mention of only the name. "Mrs. Guest—Mrs. Allen," "——and Mrs. Underwood," "—— and Mrs. Noble," "—— and Mr. Allen," "—— Mr. Underwood," and so forth. The stunt is to keep up a gracious manner during this proceeding! Also, I think that if you are determined not to be in a hurry, it makes the introductions easier. Many people, when they are introducing a group, are overcome by the repetition of the names and then, of course, they get panicky and lose their poise. Take your time in the introductions, mention each name distinctly and you will be all right.

3. Say "That dance was very delightful," or "I enjoyed every minute of dancing with you," or something that will indicate that you, too, enjoyed the dance.

4. When the hostess is thanked, the best mannered hostess will say something that indicates that she thanks her guest for coming to our party.

Watch a hostess that you admire and [illegible] hear her say when the guest thanks her for her hospitality. "It was very kind of you to come, Mrs. Ain," or "Thank you so much for coming," or "I enjoyed so much having you come. Please come again soon," or "It was delightful to have you with us. I hope that we shall have that pleasure again soon."

By all means cultivate this way of receiving the expression of thanks of your guests. It is most gracious, most cultured, and always done by people of culture. The reason is, obviously, that the guest at once has a feeling of gracious hospitality.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

(1) I expect to give a dance very soon and would like to know if the word "formal" should be placed on the invitations to the girls and the word "informal" on the invitations to the boys.

(2) When an invitation is sent to three boys in the same family how do you address the envelope?

CONSTANT READER

NO, this would not be correct. How would it be possible for the same party to be both formal and informal? Why should there be a distinction between the sexes concerning the formality of the party?

As a matter of fact, it is never correct, in any kind of invitation, to write "formal" on the invitation. The formality of the party—or its informality—is suggested and indicated by the form of the invitation. The invitation to the formal party is written in the third person, for instance. Like this:

Miss Mary Hostess
requests the pleasure of your company at her, etc.

Or the invitation to a tea or an informal musicale may be written on a visiting card.

But the informality of a party would be suggested by writing, say, a note in the first person, like any other kind of letter.

Like this:

Dear Marguerite:

Mother and I are giving a small dance on the fifth of December and we want very much to have you come. It is to be at nine o'clock at—etc.

2. It is proper for a lady to [illegible] a separate invitation, [illegible] this will please each better. If you really must send only one invitation to the three, write the names under one another, putting the name of the oldest boy first:

Mr. Anthony Emars,
Mr. George Emars,
Mr. Walter Emars.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

NOW that the holidays are approaching, thousands of young couples are taking mistletoe lessons.

EVERY chandelier is a cafeteria and you have to know how to help yourself.

GIRLS are so rushed around Christmas that they can't waste their time on amateurs.

NECKING is an art, and every man should know his Adam's apples.

IT'S all right to be innocent, but no flapper likes to struggle through an evening with a beginner.

THE average girl enjoys having a fellow steal a kiss even if she has to help him with the robbery.

IT'S what she calls grand larceny.

VERY few women have any respect for a mn who takes "no" for an answer.

OSCULATION is a study, and any sofa is a classroom.

THOUSANDS of married women are even taking post-graduate courses.

THE trouble with them is that they don't have enough home work.

KISSING is nicer around the holidays because there's more competition.

CHRISTMAS EVE is when the girls usually start making friends for the Winter.

THEY get enough petting to last them until the Summer resorts open.

MISTLETOE has done more for women than vacuum cleaners and washing machines.

EVEN old maids get a few smacks now and then from men who need practice.

ONE fellow claims he's a novice at kissing. He says he's been married for three years.

WHILE spooning is unnecessary at home, every husband should brush up on his necking. You never know when you might have to go out of town.

Mrs. Solomon Says---

By HELEN ROWLAND

HEAR, oh my daughter, the song of songs which every woman chanteth in her heart.

Behold, I have known much men a little and a few men much; but HE excelleth them all.

Lo, he is the Perfect Lover whose kisses are more tender than rose-leaves, more gentle than the Spring rain, yet more intensive than a thunderstorm!

He is the Prince Charming of my visions, the Incarnation of all my dreams, the sturdy oak on which I rejoice to lean, the spoiled boy whom I delight to mother.

He is the understanding Pal unto whom I can bare my secrets and reveal my innermost thoughts in surety of sympathy.

He is the Thoughtful Soul who forgetteth not to send flowers upon an anniversary, who never keepeth me waiting, who doeth always the graceful thing at the psychological moment, who never maketh a faux pas!

He is the Brilliant Intellect unto whom I gaze UP in admiration; yet, who harkeneth when I speak, cheereth when I am clever, laugheth when I am witty, and noteth not when I am foolish.

He is the Congenial spirit who leadeth me unto the QUIET restaurants, where the food is good, the hilarity is restrained, and the jazz band getteth not upon my nerves nor shattereth mine ears.

He is the Gentle Philosopher who doth not require me to be an angel, neither suspecteth me to be a devil, but regardeth me as a Human Being, which the Lord knoweth I AM!

He is the Inspirational Being who bringeth hyacinths to feed my soul and quoteth poetry to charm mine imagination—the happy Play-boy with whom I rejoice to dance upon a holiday.

He is the mold of fashion whose chin is always shaven, whose collar concealeth his Adam's apple, whose garments are perfect but not gaudy, who adorneth my dinner table and filleth my heart with pride.

He is the Perfect Husband who packeth a trunk without swearing, never forgetteth the tickets, always praiseth the cooking, tendeth the furnace without complaint, and never yearneth for an evening out!

He is the Idealist who perceiveth not the flaws in my disposition, the runs in my stocking, nor the rouge upon my cheek, but accepteth me "as is" and acclaimeth me perfect!

He is the World's Wonder, who never looketh at another woman!

He is the Man-Who-Never-Was!

He is my MIGHT-HAVE-BEEN!
Selah.

FAMOUS COMPOSERS

By COZETTE DOUGLASS

THE humbler walks of life seem ever destined to lead their children into the paths of fame and glory. Most of the world's genius springs from the hut of the peasant and it would seem that Dame Fortune ever tries to recompense her less fortunate children by endowing them with gifts far above the material.

Thus it was with Francois Arien Boieldiau. His father was the secre- he was twelve years old, the sensi- mother a milliner. He was born in Rouen on December 16, 1775, and early in life was apprenticed to an intemperate, brutal organist. When he was twelvt years old, the sensitive boy rebelled against the harsh treatment, and ran away, walking to Paris. After some difficulty he was found and brought back. There is no record of his receiving any other teaching than that of Brocht, the organist.

When he was eighteen, he produced two operas, which were successfully produced in Rouen. His father was the librettist. He determined to seek greater fame in Paris, and again walked to Paris. His reception there was most discouraging, and he was forced to earn a precarious living as a piano tuner.

Through his employer, Erard, he met Cherubini and Garat, the tenor, who liking Francois' songs, sang them at his concerts, and thereby gained for him public recognition.

It is probable that Boieldieu's knowledge of counterpart was gained from Cherubini, for after a silence of three years, during which time he studied faithfully, he produced "Ma Tante Aurore" which proved successful.

In 1802 he married Clotilde Mafleuroy, a ballet dancer, a union which proved most unhappy. The result of this was that Boieldieu went to Russia in 1803, where he stayed for eight years. In 1811 he returned to Paris and in 1812 his opera, "Jean de Paris," when produced was received with wildest enthusiasm. However, it was not until 1825 that he achieved his greatest success, this with the opera "La Dame Blanche," which is still generally accepted as his masterpiece. On the death of his first wife in 1827, he married Mlle. Phillis, singer, whose devotion and care consoled his later years.

On his retirement from the Conservatoire, where he had been professor of composition, he was pensioned by the government, which, however, was revoked in 1830. However, Thiers, minister of Louis Philippe granted him an annuity of 6,000 francs. Suffering from pulmonary disease, he went to Pisa in search of the health which he never regained. He died at his country home in Jarcy on October 8, 1834.

ELECTION TO AFFECT TRADE BUT LITTLE

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Dec. 3.—C. E. Groesbeck, the right-hand man of Sidney Z. Mitchell in the managing or supervising of scores of public utility properties throughout the country, has returned from a lengthy business tour through the West and the South. I got Mr. Groesbeck to give a brief picture of business conditions for readers of this column.

C. E. GROESBECK

Thus:

"Idaho has had excellent crops, with plenty of water. Livestock has brought good prices. Farmers are paying off loans and are in better shape than for a number of years past. In Utah one finds similar agricultural conditions. While the mining industry has been, of course, quiet, improvement has now set in. Salt Lake City is growing rapidly.

"California continues to attract many people from the Middle-West, with the result that practically all California cities are increasing in population. They certainly have climate there! In Arizona, especially territory around the Verde and Salt River districts, very important development is going on. Citrus fruit is coming to the front. Production of alfalfa is multiplying enormously. Phoenix and its environment are coming along most impressively.

"I travelled a great deal through the Texas Empire. Oil and natural gas are doing wonders for East Texas. At Houston I saw thirteen ocean-going ships—French, British, Dutch, Japanese, etc. Notwithstanding the amazing expansion of Houston as a port, Galveston is holding its own. Its cotton and sulphur shipments are very large. Galveston's climate is attracting many people, and it promises to become a notable Winter resort.

"In New Orleans—as well as elsewhere—the people feel very strongly that Mississippi flood control should receive the prompt, earnest and effective attention of the Federal government wholly apart from innumerable local projects. Lives are at stake. Mississippi flood protection is not and should not be made a political question.

"I found only very mild interest in national politics throughout my trip. I do not think that the approach of the Presidential election is going to make very much difference in economic and business conditions."

PERKINS SAYS PUBLIC SHARES PROSPERITY

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

James H. Perkins, president of the Farmers Loan & Trust Company, one of New York city's largest financial institutions, is pleased by the growing number of American industrial and other shareholders, as noted in this column from time to time. The latest figure estimated them to be 22,000,000 in number. President Perkins sees our investing public as increasingly sharing in prosperity, participating more and more in the long string of dividends, stock, regular and extra.

* * *

JAMES H. PERKINS
(Copyright Underwood & Underwood)

* * *

One of the least inspiring spectacles the American public is called upon to witness from time to time is the so-called investigation of financial concerns and transactions by public officials whose lack of proper training unfits them about 100 per cent. for the work in which they engage. Again, it is nearly always the case that the "barn door is locked after the horse has been stolen."

* * *

In the past we have seen "bucket shops" run wide open for years, taking millions of dollars out of the class of buyers who could least afford the loss. The final closing took care of the future, but hardly sufficed to excuse the past. I think things are being better conducted today, with what might be called private investigative bodies functioning ably.

* * *

I am told the Boston Stock Exchange is moving along highly constructive lines. It is reported that a member of this body cannot hire a customer's man without having his previous connections and record looked up by responsible persons. If these are not found satisfactory, the man isn't hired, I hear.

* * *

National weekly says "rule of Primo de Rivera seems to be growing increasingly irksome to the Spanish people." This may be true, but efforts to secure for him as a gift the famous Nassak diamond, $400,000 gem which ornamented the sword of the Marquis of Westminster, do not indicate unpopularity. As a matter of fact, unpopularity of dictators does not appear to be based on present-day fact. With about 17 so-called dictators in the saddle today, Pangalos of Greece and Chamorro of Nicaragua are the only two ex-dictators on record.

* * *

The World War was supposed to "make the world safe for democracy." In those days the one supreme dictatorship was the Czar's. Now we find these eight "bourgeois kings" or sometimes styled dictators: Mussolini, Italy; Kemal, Turkey; Stalin, Russia; Pilsudski, Poland; Di Rivera, Spain; Ibanez, Chile; Carmona, Portugal; and Horthy, Hungary. Also by some writers included in the near-dictator class are Gomez, Venezuela; Zogu, Albania; Kondylis, Greece; Calles, Mexico; Riza Kahn, Persia; Albert, Belgium; Ras Taffari, Abyssinia. And a lot of petty dictators, like the Chinese tuchuns, or provincial heads, might be added.

* * *

Ionel Britianu, dictator of Rumania, has passed suddenly. His brother succeeds him and it remains to be seen whether he will also be classed as a dictator.

* * *

The name of one so-called dictator more than that of any other is heard in Boston financial circles: Mussolini. Many are the conjectures as to Italy's future. All bright, with the proviso that Mussolini is not finally felled by one of the inglorious assassins whose names defile history's pages. A discussion of Mussolini even took up some time at the latest gathering of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts at the Copley-Plaza.

President Judson of Continental Motors Corpn. tells me in straight-from-the-shoulder fashion that his company is not considering and does not intend to consider any merger plans.

RADIO DIALOG

by

C. WILLIAM RADOS

"WHAT the Chimney Says" and "Just Once Again" were two high spots which stood out on the WNAC, WOR Dependable Hour last night. While excellent program of vocal and orchestral numbers made this the best such broadcast, the voice of Columbia had a cold. It sounded raw and rough.

* * *

New York WEAF, WJZ; WSBC, Chicago; NAA, Virginia; WMAK, Buffalo, and WOR, Newark, were the dependable broadcasts last evening. Sport fans could have heard WMSG reporting a fight from Madison Square Garden. At least it sounded like Madison Square Garden but this station is badly hetrodyned. WEAF comes through well but is sandwiched between WEEI and WNAC. Many listeners will be unable to get the New Yorker.

ditions and possibilities of improvement, year in and year out, is optimistic in his report for 1927.

"Real wages in the United States remain higher than anywhere else in the world, or in any time of the world's history."

Knowing what the resources of this country are, he sees "lasting prosperity." Mr. Hoover is one of the men whose earnestness, sincerity and good work help to create and maintain prosperity.

Mrs. Taylor, talented Los Angeles musician, says we sing the wrong kind of songs, which accounts for our crime wave. Such songs as "Red Hot Mamma," says this lady, "drive youth to crime." Young people sing the foolish songs, and young people fill the modern prisons.

Saxophones are harmless. Jazz properly used is all right, songs about love are all right, and drive nobody to crime, if they are modest. Mrs. Taylor writes some herself. It is "Red Hot Mamma" affection that does the harm.

All over the world the real war is industrial war, which has no armistice and never stops. France and Germany have combined in a gigantic dye trust, good for both countries because it will make money, and France and Germany having interest in common, may forget about fighting.

We are developing big units here. The second and third biggest chain stores in the United States, Kresge and Kress, are planning a $250,000,000 merger. They do a business of $190,000,000 a year. And Julius Rosenwald, all by himself, does as much.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad, the stock of which went climbing yesterday, is operated in a country with population smaller than that within forty miles of New York's city hall. What makes Wall street pay such high prices for a Canadian railroad?

How do you explain the Canadian government's ability to operate Canada's National Railroads, National Telephone systems, well, with a profit?

JARDINE LISTS FARMER'S ILLS

Washington, Dec. 3 (I.N.S.)—The administration has no legislative cure-all for the farmer. It still vigorously opposes the McNary-Haugen and other alleged "price fixing" or "subsidy" bills, and believes such measures detrimental rather than helpful to agriculture.

If the farmer is to prosper he must solve his own problems without paternalistic aid from the Federal government, Secretary of Agriculture Jardine declared today in his annual report.

"A large part of the farm problem—which in fact, consists of many problems—must be solved by the individual and co-operative efforts of the farmers themselves," Jardine said. "However, there is need for legislation to give encouragement to large agricultural business organizations owned and controlled by farmers.

"I am convinced united action is possible, and that it is the greatest single need of agriculture today."

Co-operative marketing restriction of acreage, flexible credit facilities and installation of modern machinery are the chief instruments through which agriculture can work out its own destinies, he declared.

California Calls

Schumann-Heink Is Going Home to Stay

ERNESTINE SCHUMANN-HEINK

Ernestine Schumann-Heink, who comes to us tomorrow afternoon for a farewell concert, is a veteran determined to do no superfluous lagging on the stage.

Bostonians who again last year were delighted with the great contralto's singing of Erda in Das Rheingold, at the Metropolitan Opera, found her rich voice unimpaired by time. But Madame is 66, her California home is calling—there is no finer beach in all the world than Coronado's—and she will not run the risk of looking out one day upon a sympathetic audience in tears.

Great as the artiste, Schumann-Heink has been equally successful as mother. Her arduous climb to the heights with four or five little ones clinging to her skirts should be a silencer for some of our young married folk who look upon babies as obstacles to Success.

One by one the citadels of the world of opera were captured by this golden voice. First Dresden, then Hamburg, next Bayreuth and, when she was 31, Covent Garden.

When Maurice Grau brought her to America, in 1898, she was 37. She believed, she has said, that she was going to see Indians here, and elephants "and God knows what." What she did see was a Nation hungry for her song. America fell in love with her and she with America. When her next baby was born, she called him George Washington.

In our time there has been no other contralto voice like that of Schumann-Heink. If luck is with you, you may hear it Sunday afternoon. The event will be something to tell your grandchildren.

Congress Must Place Lobbyists in the Open

Congress, which assembles next week, must do one job of house-cleaning before the session closes. It is that of putting into the open lobbyists of all brands receiving compensation for their services, that Congress and the country may know their connections, if not their methods.

One writer has described the swarms of lobbyists as the "Third House of Congress." They are brazenly, perniciously active at all times. The majority of members of Congress do not know the truth as to their activities and their connections. The public knows nothing unless the President or some statesman forces an investigation of lobbying processes, which seldom happens.

Hiram Johnson comes out with charges that the "Electric Power Trust" is again prepared to spend immense sums of money to defeat the Boulder Dam project or any other legislation in Congress that does not suit the mighty combination of electric power and electric interests in this country.

Aside from the matter of Boulder Dam, lobbyists DO swarm the halls of Congress, visit committee rooms, entertain persons of influence, and get away with things the American people would not tolerate if they knew the facts.

These lobbyists CAN be brought into the open. They CAN be controlled. They CAN be prevented from underground work that is a disgrace to the country.

That they have the right to present their affairs to Congress is not questioned. Every American citizen, on legitimate business, has the right to petition Congress, to present his views there or to any other governmental agency. No law will attempt to prevent that.

The paid lobbyists may be reached by a law requiring their registration at the Capitol. Massachusetts and Wisconsin have such laws and they are reasonably effective.

Upon dockets are entered the names of all persons employed as legislative counsel or agents. These entries must include the names of employers; the names, residences, and occupations of the employes; the dates of employment, agreements, etc., and even the subjects of legislation engaged upon, with the titles and n[illegible] bills.

Lobbyists are den[illegible]n to the floors of [illegible] legislative chambers, to cloak rooms, reading rooms or reception rooms.

The Wisconsin law requires that legislative agents or counsel whose names appear on the legislative dockets must file, within thirty days after the close of a session, complete and detailed statements of expenses, under oath.

There are suitable penalties for violating the provisions of these laws, as there should be.

The lead of the conservative Massachusetts and progressive Wisconsin could safely be followed by Congress. It should be followed by that body.

The country is entitled to know what interests are attempting to influence important legislation in Congress. It is entitled to LIGHT, not darkness.

ABOUT PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE Kaiser was reported to have said the other day, "I am sixty-eight years old. Looking back over the pinnacle of my years and my experience, I am glad to say I have no philosophy except my religion."

The Kaiser seems to draw a distinction between a philosophical person and a religious person.

But religion is really a philosophy and having a philosophy simply means a way of looking at life.

Religion is one attitude towards life and irreligion another.

The irreligious has as much of a philosophy as the religious.

Religion is not a set of forms and ceremonies nor a compendium of beliefs. In the last analysis it is one's way of acting.

The early apostles spoke of the Christians as people who lived according to a certain "way."

Much trouble has been caused in the world by thinking that religion is merely a belief about getting safely into the next world. Really, it is a way of looking at this world.

It is a point of view that controls our actions. It is a method by which we live and by which we think.

Religion is merely belief that the cosmic processes are so and so.

Jesus Christ was not only a founder of a religion, but his philosophy of living was remarkable.

The main thing about the Kaiser's philosophy is that it is all wrong. By separating his religion and his philosophy he has divided his belief about life and his method of living into two parts. This cannot be done.

Religion is of no value unless it enters into our daily conduct, our speech and our thoughts.

Every one is a sort of philosopher, that is, he has a way of looking at things and runs true to form.

One may have a philosophy and yet it may change from day to day, but the new way of looking at things is quite as much a philosophy as the old.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

THIRTY seven years ago, when Professor Charles E. Fay, famous Tufts mountaineer, met the Duke Abruzzi, he did not know the Duke's friendship would stretch over the many years. Fay, whose home is decorated with pictures of mountains in every part of the world, has just received three more to add to his collection from Vittorio Cella, mutual friend of the professor and the Duke, and the world's foremost photographer of natural scenery.

Because he is always trying to assist people, Henry Yozell, business man of a dozen interests, recently found himself some more work in the erection of the new synagogue in Lynn. Yozell, discovering that a need existed for a new synagogue, was largely instrumental in the erection and maintenance of Temple Beth-El. Not to quit there, Yozell attends meetings of the board of the Lynn Hebrew Free School, is chairman of the United Jewish Charities, and is actively engaged in Boston Hebrew charities and athletics.

Speaking of famous teachers recalls Professor Charles Townsend Copeland of Harvard, probably the greatest teacher of English in the country, now on a leave of absence. When at Harvard, Copeland lives in the yard in one of its oldest dormitories. Evening finds him in his rooms, comfortably arrayed in an old dressing gown, slippers on his feet. Occasionally he wanders into one of the students' rooms and it is always with great pleasure that they receive him. For beloved "Copey" is such an interesting talker that when he speaks to the students attendance is restricted, otherwise the Stadium could be filled with the Copey enthusiasts.

Frank Griffin of Cambridge, photograph collector, was recently making a purchase of a small lot in an old Davis Square, Somerville, building. Later he examined the prints somewhat carefully to discover he had a very rare Lincoln print dating back to the Civil War. This he proudly placed on his walls, which are covered with the pictures of famous Americans.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

HENDRICK WILLEM VAN LOON, the writer, and Frances Goodrich, the actress, have married. Here is their wedding agreement.

"Neither has assumed the slightest obligation towards the other. Neither has any claim upon the time, society or affections of the other.

"Each maintains a separate establishment, and each is at complete liberty to work out a career without hindrance or advice.

"As there is no sharing of the home, there is no sharing of property or money.

"Such association as there may be between them can only be through mutual agreement."

There's the Van Loon marriage platform—how do you like it?

"I don't believe it will work," you say. "You can't get something for nothing. You can't get any real profit out of marriage unless you're willing to stand a little discomfort and sacrifice and make a lot of adjustments. It's really the trouble they share that brings married people together. If each one insists on living his own life, they'll never have anything in life in common."

Yes, perhaps you're right. Nevertheless, there's something about the Van Loon marriage which may make it of great importance in human history.

IT SUITS THE VAN LOONS.

These two people, facing marriage, were not like any other two people. They had needs and problems peculiar to them.

They had found, through experience, that they could not always do the things other people did, with success. So they arranged a marriage code which they thought would serve them and their particular necessities—FITTING MARRIAGE TO THEIR LIVES RATHER THAN TRYING TO FIT THEIR LIVES TO MARRIAGE.

No one knows, yet, whether their experiment will work. But, at least, they have taken the most intelligent and generous attitude toward each other and marriage.

That's the sort of thing that is going to save marriage. Not more laws—we have too many laws—but more elastic adaptation of those laws to our individual problems. Why should we expect the Richard Roes to follow the program that suits the John Does? The Richard Roes and the John Does are entirely different couples. Four distinct human beings, with peculiar temperaments and problems are involved in those two unions. No two of them see life from the same angle—no two of them can do their best under the same conditions. Why try to pour those four spirits into one rigid mold? Why not adjust marriage so that it fits the peculiar problems of each couple, and respects the rights of every individual?
